Basically, our world changed. Money became scarce within the school system and students were forced to make do with what the school could obtain for them. "The budget has been cut in the classroom and out on the playing fields. 'We really feel the impact of the budget on our daily lives. We have less supplies in our classes and the sports' seasons have been cut," said senior Sarah Robbins. According to an interview with Robert Spillane in "The Washington Post" on September 3, 1992, per pupil expenses went from $6,700 to $6,200 in three years. To save the environment, students became more careful about recycling and the products they used. The saying "Reduce, Reuse, Recycle" became popular. "I try to keep the environment in mind when I do things in my everyday life. It is important to use environmentally friendly products such as detergents and paints," said freshman Saurin Shah. The yearbook cover reappeared in the school colors and again, after 20 years, the school had a mascot. Class competitions were removed from the school and no longer was a homecoming float made. Life had returned to simpler times. Fashion became clean and elegant. The layered look in style became unpopular. "Plain slacks and a shirt are the most popular outfit now. People try to stay away from the overdone look," said junior Melanie Dun-Moodie. After a frivolous decade, students had come full circle and returned BACK to the BASICS.

ON A DAILY BASIS

Elections arrived and students became involved. The election became anything but basic when independent Ross Perot entered the race, exited in July and reentered it in October, a mere five weeks before election day. The school upheld some shocking new county policies. If a student possesed a beeper on school grounds, it would be immediatley confiscated and turned over to the police. Charges would then have to be pressed. If a student complained of any unwanted touching, county policy required the administrators to bring in the police. The school took a strong stand when it came to legal affairs. With a recession on, students had to earn more of their own money. Seniors Leticia Cavazos, Marie McWhorter and Carla Penn worked worked at Olin Mills portrait studies 24 hours a week. Since county funds were cut short, field trips were cut to a bare minimum. The government classes held car washes on September 19 and 26 to earn money for their trip to Capitol Hill. The first car wash was held in the rain. Students learned to live with what they had and to expand on the basics they possessed.

Lovely Night

On May 21 at 9 pm, limos rolled into the Springfield Hilton. Formally clad students rushed in for fun and excitement. 12 hours earlier the junior officers, Ms. Regina Williams, and helpers including senior Ray Britt and graduate Amanda Barton had decorated for the 1992 Prom.

The pastel colored decorations included a balloon arch for the entrance and balloons tied in bunches for the ceilings of the three ballrooms. "The decorations looked simple, yet very elegant," said senior Claudia Nunez.

The '94 and '95 class officers sat beneath a prom logo mural painted by Britt, greeted the revelers, took tickets and gave out memory books.

The evening climaxed with the crowning of the king and queen. The room roared when graduate and senior class president Manisha Sethi received her crown. "Manisha looked a lot like Paula Abdul. She was cute and petite," said senior Gina McClellan.

She and graduate king Lou Golden danced to the prom theme "It's so Hard to Say Goodbye to Yesterday" by Boyz II Men. This song also turned out to be the graduation theme. "Prom was nice, but they played very few slow songs. I would have liked to have heard more," said senior Keith Jones.

Fresh Faces

On a hot sunny May 28 at 12:30, the school bell rang. Students and faculty poured out of the building. Thoughts turned to jumping on the moon-bounce, dropping teachers into a pool of water just by the throw of a ball and listening to music. Mayfest fever struck.

Faculty and students devoted much of their time and work to this fundraiser. Said senior Billy Maine, "We worked hard to set up a biology club stand." Inter-Club Council meetings became frequent.

A variety of booths, from face painting sponsored by the Key Club to the selling of pictures by the yearbook, covered the grounds. Said junior Kevin Simpson, "I thought Mayfest was better this year."

Competitions became a main event at Mayfest. The junior class captured the class competition contest. Mr. Sexy Legs went to coach Randy Slack, who beat four fellow male teachers.

Music highlighted the afternoon. Various bands played everything from neo-classical works by Yngwie Malmsteen to the Beastie Boys. Senior Bobby Bracey said, "The music was the best part of the whole thing.

Hungry students filled their stomachs with egg rolls and Salvadorian tacos and pupusas from the International Club booth. The American Studies Club grilled hot dogs and baked apple pie. The yearbook provided Baskin-Robbins ice cream bars and Black Cultural Alliance sold homemade cookies.

It was a long hot day. As the sun went down, students cooled off, clubs broke down their stands and bands packed up their equipment. Mike Kelly, 12

Cleaning Up

Eyes teared; students coughed and wheezed as they walked along the highway for three hours. DECA students participated in the "adopt a highway" program and spent time each month picking up litter along a stretch of Route 1. While cleaning up the highway they found a shopping cart, furniture and even a pair of dentures. The students who participated gave a tremendous effort to save the earth.

Pollution loomed as one of the world's bigger problems. Around school many teachers and clubs put up posters to remind students of all the "little things" that they could do. "I think every single one of us plays a big role when it comes to the environment," said senior Laura Rivas.

Some of the "little things" that students did included writing letters to companies, picking up litter, buying products in minimum packaging and recycling glass, aluminium, paper and plastic.

In classrooms, teachers put out boxes to collect used paper to be taken to a recycling plant. This year the cafeteria also collected used trays and aluminum cans to be recycled.

Students also recycled at home. "I recycle plastic, aluminum cans and glass," said freshman Akisha Sanford.

The shrinking rain forests also concerned students. To prove it, senior Sarah Robbins chomped away at Rainforest Crunch bars, junior Chrissy Mittendorff shopped at the Body Shop and freshman Oliver Sharpe wore environmentally conscious T-shirts. Junior Chrissy Mittendorff said, "I shop at the Body Shop; everything there is environmentally safe. I like to think it makes a difference."

Among others, junior Grant Ross and freshman Keala Murdock became vegetarians to put pressure on companies to stop clearing the rainforests and to protest the use of animals for food. English teacher Mr. Bob Ingalls sponsored the Vegetarian Club.

People pulled together to save the earth. Contributions may have been as small as recycling a glass bottle or picking up a candy wrapper on the street. Not all students could start a recycling program in their neighborhood or get rid of an incinerator in their state. However, students tried to help as best they could to make this world a better place to live in for them and their future children. Jennifer Saks, 9

"I had mixed feelings about graduation."

Saying Bye

On June 8 an arsonist set a fire that damaged part of the Michael Skinner Field House and threw graduaton plans into a turmoil. However, county maintenance personnel and the custodial staff worked round the clock and students graduated.

The June 10 senior banquet began the final round of events. Class president Manisha Sethi organized an informal skit satirizing the school and its teachers. They roasted Mr. Tim Kerlin for his constant Civil War chatter, Mrs. Jeanne Cangianelli for her short skirts and Mrs. Cynthia Rufty for her slides.

Tradition held as National Cathedral served as the site for Baccalaurate on June 14. Jackie Cho presented an original piece titled "Future's Gift" while Nicole Palya read Christian Dodd's "Dedication to the Class of '92."

In a break from tradition, the five students with a 4.0 or above served as co-valedictorians. Margaret Chase read from "Oh, the Places You'll Go" by Dr. Seuss. Jackie Adams talked about the old woman who lived in a shoe as she wished for the class to "Grow up, but never grow old." David Ko gave a prayer instead of his rehersed speech. Karen Parsons spoke of the problems facing the United States. Hyun Kim chose not to speak.

The class responded by throwing beach balls and spraying silly string. Michael Dean brought his water gun while Chris Gallahan and Scott McLeod tucked supplies into their gowns. Faculty marshalls took the confiscated items home to their kids.

At the all-night party held at Mt. Vernon Recreation Center, friends shared laughter and tears as they signed yearbooks, exchanged new addresses and promised to be friends to the end.

Soaring High

Summer served as the time when students and teachers relaxed. Sophomore Jenny l'Anson spent her summer with her friends. "I spent the majority of my summer with my friend Bianca Lingle. I had not seen her for about three years and had an enjoyable reunion," said, l'Anson.

For different reasons, such as purchasing a new car, obtaining spending cash or saving for college, students' minds turned to the thought of jobs. Whatever the reason, money motivated students to search for work. "I worked for my father during the summer and was rewarded with a substantial amount of money. I also got a good sun tan from working outside all of the time," said freshman Rusty Turner.

During the summer students took time off of work to take vacations. Students that were interested in sports had to spend most of their summer in training. Students in band had to go to band camp, those accepted went to governor's school, students also attended Boys' and Girls' state

On August 31, 1992 Hurricane Andrew demolished most of the southern coast of Florida. Junior Heather Bolton stayed in a shelter during the entire hurricane. Bolton said, "We were just about to leave Florida when the hurricane hit. We were forced to stay in a shelter so we would not be hurt. After it was over, we left the shelter and went to my grandfather's house only to find that his roof had been blown off. With Strength

As he strained to lift the weights, sweat poured off his half naked body that bulged with muscles. Sophomore Rob Barrie lifted weights three times a week in his bedroom. This was a routine for many students who tried to stay fit.

Everywhere students looked, they saw food. With a different club selling candy each week, health conscious students found it hard to resist. Being healthy proved very important. Vegetarians grew in numbers and the salad/deli bar in the cafeteria allowed students to make a choice. "It's good to see that the school is recognizing vegetarians. It makes it a lot easier for me to eat a more healthy lunch at school," said junior Sochenda Dan.

The Vegetarian Club provided a forum where students could discuss their eating habits and give each other recipes. Health conscious students shopped at Straight from the Crate. Here students could buy tofu, vitamins, whole grains and fresh fruits.

Student walked or ran to keep fit and to save money. They did not have to join pricey health clubs; they could just exercise right near their homes or jobs. Seniors Jill Barrett and Heather Traci ran on the track almost everyday on their off period to keep fit. Traci and Barrett both had afterschool jobs so they had to exercise during school hours.

"Every Thursday before a football game I walk three miles to think about the game. It helps to clear my head," said Senior Cornell Lesane. Students relieved some of their school stress through after-school activites such as playing a sport or just relaxing. "When I day dream in school during a stressful day, I think about playing basketball. Basketball keeps me mentally and physically in shape," said senior Ricky Hampton

"Fashion is purely a state of mind."

Unique Look

"A lack of style is a style in itself. Your style reflects you as an individual. You're stylish when you think you're stylish. Fashion is a state of mind," said senior James Harris.

Style not only said "Hey look at me!", they also showed a person's uniqueness. "Your style is what you feel most confident wearing. The way you dress stands for what kind of person you are," said junior Angela Bowers.

Instead of being defined as the latest "in" fad, style became an individual statement. A simple accessory, such as an outrageous hat, had the power to transform an everyday pair of blue jeans and a shirt into a unique outfit. Senior Eric Young wore a sombrero, while a red fisherman's hat gave junior Todd Williams his look.

People avoided the everyday style for something totally different. A leisure suit provided senior James Harris with one of his many identities and sophomore Monika Zakar loved to wear the classic clothes from the '20s and '30s. Dressing differently, freshmen Bob Lucas and Mike Kilday-Pares made a point of wearing sports coats and ties with shorts and t-shirts. Lucas said, "That's nothing, last year I wore a pink tutu."

Although students strove for individuality, they also expected comfort from their clothes. "Clothes don't have to match, they just have to be comfortable," said sophomore Damien Higdon. Among others, junior Joseph Jesswein and freshman Caleb Nottingham found a unique style as they dressed for comfort.

Wearing clothes that showed individuality became much more important than any certain style of clothes worn. Developing a personal style reflected a willingness to "march to the beat of a different drummer." Stachea Bridges, 11

"Parents don't want their little girls to grow up."

Times change

Subliminal messages flashed wherever students went. Hot! . . . Exciting! . . . Sexy! blared from beer commercials, car commercials, popular songs, TV shows, movies and magazines. Every time they looked at something, one message flashed at them—sex.

Advertisers used sex to sell everything from Gap jeans to Toyotas. Novelty sex jokes sold out at gift stores. High school provided a real learning experience for students in more ways than one. By the end of freshmen year, most students lost their innocent outlook. Bathroom graffiti alone accounted for that.

Magazines spewed out helpful hints in articles such as "Top 10 Ways to Make Him Yours" and "The Intimacy Report". "YM", "Mademoiselle" and "Glamour" graced the bedrooms of teenage girls, all of them telling about how to cope with sex and its consequences. Article topics ranged from sexually transmitted diseases to the emotional trials of teenage sex. Psychology teacher Mr. Derek Steele said, "People use sex as a power game, as a tool to use others instead of using it to express their love."

Coming of age in the '90s arrived too soon and the bliss of ignorance ended too early. Parents and students found themselves faced with a huge communication gap. "Parents don't want their little girls to grow up; they don't want to think about it. They don't want it to happen," said senior Denise DeJesus.

Talking with parents about personal things became a real problem for students. Student support groups like the Peer Helpers gave students someone to talk to. Guidance counselors and teachers also advised students on such subjects. Biology classes discussed forms of birth control and health classes talked about STDs. Hotlines and pamphlets filled in the gaps in school information about unprotected sex.

Administrators banned vulgar and obscene T-shirts and new rules about "unwanted touching" went into effect. Junior Jennifer Mullins said, "I bought a T-shirt at the beach this summer with lizards in different sexual positions on it. I never got to wear it to school because of the new rule."

Changing times called for changing rules not just in school, but in life. Mandy Sahay, 12

Dressing Up

As the air turned cooler, the leaves turned color, the tests turned harder and students' minds turned to Homecoming.

Subschool decorations, skits and class spirit competitions showed the spirit of each class; however, the junior class officers decided to promote school unity by eliminating the traditional float competition. "Homecoming wasn't the same without the float competition; there didn't seem to be as much spirit as usual. Some traditions shouldn't be changed," said senior Linda Troung.

"Decades" served as the theme for the festivities. The freshmen had the '60s, the sophomores chose the year 2000, the juniors picked the '70s and the seniors decided on the 50's.

The football team triumphed over the Jefferson Colonials 12 to 0, providing the first victorious Homecoming in six years. "Winning the game was a great feeling, but playing in the mud was the real fun. I felt proud that it was my senior year that we finally won a homecoming game," said center Bobby Shelton.

Despite the cold and rainy weather, a large crowd turned out. At half-time, court members marched across the field and waited breathlessly for the announcement of the homecoming King and Queen. Senior Emily Lebron said, "I wasn't paying attention when Mr. Tepper explained what to do if crowned queen, because I didn't think I would win. When they called my name, I wasn't sure what to do; I was so surprised." Senior Vernon Dean didn't learn that he had been chosen as King until he came out of the locker room.

Since the homecoming dance took place on October 31st, some students decided to go to the dance in costume. Senior Caroline Henderson went as a bum, with senior friends Gazala Ansari dressed as a baby and Vickie Hughes dresssd as Minnie Mouse. "Forever Young" served as the theme song. "I think I would have had more fun if I had stayed longer," said freshmen Christina Short.

Military Kid

"I love being a military child. I receive loads of benefits such as medical care and shopping at the commissary. I feel that the military takes care of people throughout their lives, even when they retire," said senior Sarah Robbins.

Most of the enlisted active duty military lived in Woodlawn Village, a military housing complex. Officer, reservist and retired military children often lived off base. "There is a big difference between living on and off base. The facilities on base are much better. It's also much more expensive to live off base," said junior Marty Kloster.

Students who had military ID's had access to many military facilities such as the Wallace Movie Theater, the bowling alley, the Commissary, the Post Exchange and the Four Seasons shop. "I like the privilege of using the exchange for military personnel and their families only," said junior Liz Dorman. Products had lower price tags at these shops on base and they also had no sales tax.

"I hate the military because the army moves us around way too much," said sophomore Michael Baxter. Students found it difficult to move to a new area every three or four years.

"As soon as I make new friends and get used to a new place, I always end up moving again. I have lived in so many places it is hard to count them all. Making new friends is always tough," said senior Leticia Cavazos.

Extra-curricular activities filled weekday free time. "During the week I have practices and on Wednesdays I go to Young Life. It's fun and it gets you out of the house, plus a lot of my friends go which makes it even better," said junior Chrissy Mittendorff. Freshman Oliver Sharp, sophomore Terri Avondet, junior Jonathan Gibb and senior Eric Young also attended Young Life.

Clubs and sports kept students busy at school. When they got home groups formed to kick back and watch their "Beverly Hills 90210," "Melrose Place," "Quantum Leap" and "Young Indiana Jones."

Long awaited weekends meant more free time to spend with friends and family. "On the weekends I just do whatever comes up. I've learned that weekends aren't really planned; they just kind of happen," said freshman Jenny Dodd. Freshmen and sophomores hung out in Olde Towne, went skating or attended friend's parties. At parties students watched movies, "Saturday Night Live" and stand up comedy shows.

Going with the flow proved the most common thing among the upperclassmen. They went to a variety of places and didn't arrive home until sunrise. "I usually meet up with friends and then we decide what we're going to do if we haven't already planned something," said senior Steve Smith.

True Friends

"Sometimes you need to talk to someone, someone who knows you so well he can finish your sentence for you or tell what you're thinking by looking at your face. Someone who always understands you, that's a best friend," said senior Annika Levy. Whatever the definition, people needed companions.

Friends didn't always start off on the right foot though. Freshman Diante Hensen said, "My best friend is Vernon Dean; I met him in summer league basketball. At first we were sort of enemies, because I used to go with a girl he used to like. But then we realized that she wasn't worth it, and our friendship grew out of the experience."

Although most friendships formed between people of the same gender, some students found that it better to have close friends of the opposite sex. Sophomore Becky Jeffreys said, "One of my closest friends is Tim Fitzgerald. He's great because I know I can trust him to keep something secret, and I know he won't stab me in the back."

"It's all about trust. I know I can tell my best friend Yeo Jin Ko anything," said senior Yoon Kwak. "She's kind and she listens to me." When students found the school day tough they needed someone to turn to who understood what it was like being a teenager. "I can tell my friends things that I could never tell my parents," said junior Carrie Vouri. "It's not that my parents wouldn't understand; it's just that my friends know everyone involved in my situations."

Whether old or new, friends made every day a little easier because students had someone to share it with.

Surprise Gift

"Blow out the candles and make a wish," said junior Candace Leach's parents as she closed her eyes on her sixteenth birthday and silently wished for a new Polo jacket. Birthday wishes didn't always come true, but that didn't stop students from celebrating.

Birthdays, that special time for students, whether celebrating with a big party or a quiet family evening, birthdays became a time for remembering. "I remember my 9th birthday," said sophomore Latee Waters. "My parents gave me a black BMX dirtbike. I had wanted one for a long time and didn't think I was going to get one."

Many students had their lockers decorated by friends or family. Locker decorating provided a special way for students to show someone how much they cared. "My friends decorated my locker last year with candy and streamers. It really made my day more special," said senior Kim Lowe.

Presents and balloons surprised many students as their friends helped them celebrate their special day. Senior Toni Collins got a big shock when her aunt, Mrs. Winnie Bowler dressed as a clown and delivered balloons to her in Mrs. Otterness' business class.

Students turning 16 looked forward to getting their licenses and hoped to receive cars for their birthdays. Junior Susan Jackson's parents surprised her with a red Camaro convertable for her birthday. An accessory for his car satisfied senior Tony Henderson whose parents bought a new soft top for his vintage Corvette convertable.

To Nourish

Thunder rumbled in the halls as the hour hand approached 11:00. The thunder of footsteps? No, the thunder of rumbling stomachs! At lunchtime students not only satisfied their need to socialize, they satisfied their hunger.

From school food to fast food, students had to eat. "I like McDonalds food because it's cheap and it's better than my mom's cooking," said sophomore Chris Tippins. Fast food places provided a way for students to get a quick meal and spend time with friends.

On December 5 the long awaited Taco Bell opened its doors to the public, and students raced to be the first ones there. Junior Blanquita Cullum said, "I drove by Taco Bell the morning before it opened and people were lined up outside waiting to get in."

The new Taco Bell also presented the temptation to go out for lunch. Senior Julie Boyce said, "Everyone and his grandmother is skipping school and running for the border."

Some students complained about the quality of the school food. Junior Kim Barrett said, "I hate when they mix the hot fries with the cold ones to try and hide the fact that they are left over from A lunch."

Senior Wendy Wiltz didn't mind eating the cafeteria food since classmate and boyfriend Phil Williams went through the line for her and brought the food to her. As if that weren't chivilrous enough, he also paid for it.

Sometimes students had to wait until they got home from school to eat. Sophomore Pete Harris said, "When I get home from practice, if I'm hungry I'll eat animal crackers, marshmallow cookies and fruit punch."

Living Life

Where could you have gone to see a wild party, a fox hunt, someone falling off of the Matterhorn and a marriage proposal? "Auntie Mame" had them all.

Produced on February 4th, 5th and 6th, "Auntie Mame" contained an extravagant set and unique costumes. Juniors Susan Jackson and Beeky Cullum took charge of costuming. The two spent hours looking for clothes in the costume room and various local shops. English teacher Ms. Suzanne Clark provided riding habits for the fox hunt scene.

Since the costumes displayed creativity, the set had to match. Students spent long hours constructing and decorating to create the appropriate atmosphere. "It took us a while to get started, but once everyone got into gear we really started seeing results," said junior Marty Kloster, the head of the set crew.

The lighting and sound effects paid a key part in the production as well. "A lot of people were depending on us to get the lights and sound on cue. It's a pretty big job, but we did it and we enjoyed it," said sophomore Mike Guidotti.

The play contained controversial topics such as unwed mothers and minors serving alcohol, but everything ran smoothly. Senior Aubrey Coker, who portrayed both Ralph Devine and Mother Burnside, added humor to the play. When asked if she enjoyed working on a high school production, freshman Staci Kelly replied, "It was great! We had to do a lot of different things, but I learned a lot and made some new friends."

Unity and spirit added to the show. Drama teacher Mr. John Newman gave pep talks and the cast did warm ups before every performance. Mr. Taz Rufty said, "It was a good performance. The whole cast did a good job, but I especialy liked Aubrey and Mame." Jennifer Mullins, 11

Frosty Air

"Outside the snow is falling . . . ;" not in Virginia it wasn't. Sled lovers mourned the lack of snow and beach lovers celebrated it, but all agreed it wouldn't be winter without at least one day blanketed in white.

Winter mornings often began with students reaching for their radios and hoping for the announcement of school closings. "If the weather said there was supposed to be snow, the first thing I would do the next morning was look out the window for snow on the ground," said senior Gene Clayborn.

On December 14th at 10:00, snow flurries turned into bigger flakes that accumulated on the grass and on the roads resulting in a two hour early closing. The next day with driving conditions not much better, Fairfax County Schools remained closed. Enjoying the brief respite, students slept, ate, built tiny snowmen and got together to watch movies.

Winter break provided students with a ten day hiatus from class. Students went on vacation with families, attended parties or just relaxed. They stayed up and watched late night weekday TV shows, like "Studs" and "The Arsenio Hall Show." Staying out late and sleeping past noon became a common routine.

Inclement weather forced students inside. Junior Lora Saada and senior Lelo Saada bought the Cindy Crawford work out tape to prevent them from gaining weight. On cold afternoons, nothing could beat a vigorous game of "Street Fighter II."

Televised athletic events filled time when outdoor conditions wouldn't allow playing them. Students went to nearby gyms to play their favorite sports and to get some activity after being cooped up all day.

Students traveled to ski resorts. Freshman Pat Langley took his friends to his family's cottage at Bryce, Virginia for the five day Martin Luther King/ Inauguration weekend. Blue fliers enticed numerous students to participate in the annual ski trip to Canada.

Fading tans and extra clothes heralded the coming of winter. Although students enjoyed its arrival on December 20, they greeted the warmth of spring on March 20 with jubilation.

"And the winner of the 15th annual Mr Mount Vernon Contest is . . . James Harris!" said Master of Ceremonies senior Denise DeJesus as the crowd exploded into applause.

On January 28th, 10 of the top male forms competed in an effort to win the title of Mr. Mount Vernon. Talent, formal wear, casual wear and impromtu questions served as the criteria for judging.

Talent varied greatly in the competition. Senior Luis Ferreira played with his band, while sophomore Noah Kaufman read Dr. Seuss' "One Fish, Two Fish." Sophomore Damien Higdon performed a wild guitar routine in between eating an apple and brushing his teeth.

Juniors Alan Johnson and Steve Cataldo blended and then drank a live goldfish, worcestershire and Gatorade concoction. "I was absolutely disgusted with the fish blending act. It show how they used the idea as a desparate attempt to be creative," said senior Tanya Plinsky.

The formal wear and casual wear rounds showed a mixture of traditional and eccentric styles. Senior Bobby Shelton came out for the casual round dressed to pump iron, while freshman Oliver Sharpe wore denim overalls. Senior James Harris wore a vintage leisure suit for the formal round, and senior Luis Ferreira presented a western look. Contestants showed off their style, their different tastes and their sense of humor.

Impromptu questions provided the judges with a chance to get to know the contestant's personality and opinions. When asked what he considered the biggest problem in the world to be, sophomore Noah Kaufman replied, "That I can't get a date."

"At first I didn't want to be in it because I knew that seniors always win. Then I decided that it would be good practice for next year to do it this year," said freshman Kelly Hall. The fun and excitement of the contest drew the contestants in. Mandy Sahay, 12

Going to school gave students the basic knowledge needed to compete in the outside world. However, students and teachers worked to go the extra mile. Two teachers received special recognition for their efforts. Mrs. Regina Williams went to Japan for two weeks to learn about their education system. Mrs. Sarah Wagner was selected to go to the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics Convention. Senior Erick Messing also nominated her for "Who's Who Among America's Teachers." A new partnership formed between the Art Department and Corcoran Gallery of Art in Washington, DC, in which students worked directly with museum professionals. To raise money for a trip to Capitol Hill, the government classes held two car washes. The first took place on September 19 in the rain. Even with the bad weather, the class raised over $100 that day. Since arsonists burned down part of the school on June 11, 1992, the PE classes could not hold class in the Field House until mid-November. Students learned not only to care about the grades they received, but also about the basic facts they learned while studying.

Speak for Yourself

Business classes produce self-confidence

Looking ahead to the future prompted myriad questions for students. Career choices had to be made. Students looking toward the future opted to take business classes so they could learn about the fields of work that existed in the real world. "I'm taking Business Law and Fashion Merchandising. I took Introduction to Business last year to see what it was like. I took Business Law this year because I wanted to learn about the legal part of Business," said junior Kim Patterson.

Enrolling in a business or marketing class automatically made students a member of either DECA or FBLA. "The cool thing about taking a marketing class is that you are automatically in a club," said sophomore Damien Higdon.

Field trips expanded students' knowledge. Business Law students went to the Alexandria Court House and sat in on a hearing, while Fashion Merchandising students went to New York City to visit designers' studios during the December flood.

The fashion classes presented the annual spring fashion show, with "A Whole New World" as its theme, on March 11th. "Working on the fashion show was really fun. We basically planned the act that we were in ourselves, so after we had done it all, we felt that we had really accomplished something," said sophomore Haydee Nunez. Amanda Maier, 12

Trying old things a different way

Write. Edit. Rewrite Read. Study. Reread. Test. For many students, English classes seemed long and repetitive. Teachers tried to interest students by teaching new materials, encouraging student writings and creating new and exciting programs.

Senior English classes used videos of the books that they read to help understand the material better. "It's easier for me to understand the books that we read in class after seeing the movie because it makes the characters come to life," said senior Donna Oakes.

Junior classes read "The Scarlet Letter." They discussed each chapter as they read it and saw a movie of the book.

Sophomores studied Greek mythology and stories from the Bible. "It's different from any other class that I have," said Katrina Moss. "Now I have to think with the right side of my brain as well as the left. When we studied the Bible, it was funny to be introduced to all these different new points."

Saved Writings

Seniors received a rather unusual present when they graduated: a portfolio containing all of their writings in English class since their freshman year. Students started their portfolios freshman year or their first year here. Every time they finished a writing for class, it went into portfolios kept by their English teachers. The portfolios stayed with each student from year to year.

"The real value of it is that students see what they're learning," said Mr. Robert Ingalls. "You have to see what you have learned in order to learn."

Becoming assimilated through language

"In the street the language is different. It is much easier to learn it in the classroom," said junior Jose Caballero. Students who moved to America from other countries needed a place to learn English and the English as a Second Language classroom provided that place.

Students in Mrs. Diane Pearce's beginning class did a unit on mammals. They each studied a mammal, made a poster about it, and then videoed their oral presentations. As a way to express their feelings, students also wrote stories that they then shared with each other.

Mr. Jamie Britto's intermediate classes read books, wrote stories of their own in the computer lab and worked on group projects. Students also learned about the different aspects of a novel, including theme, setting and plot.

"It is hard to learn English because it is so different from my native language of Spanish," said sophomore Raquel Caballero. The advanced group, instructed by Mrs. Dianna Poodiack, concentrated on using the language fluently. They read the novel "Island of the Blue Dolphins," studied Greek Mythology and wrote myths of their own. I-Search projects on colleges and careers helped students prepare for their futures.

"Taking ESL and learning the language helped me get my job as a bagger at the commissary," said freshman Son Huynh. Knowing English also helped sophomore Douglas Rios get his job at Chuck E. Cheese.

"Math is not very hard, but my other classes are very difficult. ESL makes it easier for me," said freshman Jamie Segovia. ESL aided foreign students by helping them learn a new language and adjust to a new life. Karen Jupiter, 12

Showing Their Talents

Hands on experiences make it all happen

Creativity, talent, dreams and intellect provided the impetus for students involved in fine arts classes. In addition to drawing, painting and sculpting during class time, art students participated in the Reflections contest and the Scholastic Art Competition. A partnership with the Corcoran gave students the chance to help a sculptor install his show in February. "I love art and I like having the chance to display my work," said junior Marty Kloster.

Members of the Orchestra performed at three in-school concerts. In addition, they provided music at the signing of the Corcoran partnership and at numerous out of school events. In April, they attended a competition in New York.

Drama students welcomed a new director, Mr. John Newman. "Although I haven't been acting a long time, it is something that I enjoy and I like taking a class where I can learn about it," said senior Diane Ferguson. The Thespians attended the Virginia Thespian Conference held at Old Dominion University in Norfolk, Virginia.

The Photojournalism class spent all of its in-class hours and thousands of after-school hours producing "Back To Basics." Staffers took pictures, designed pages, wrote copy and captions and entered everything into computers. "Putting the yearbook together was definitely an experience," said junior Stachea Bridges.

Becoming Fluent

Languages provide insight to cultures

Languages, languages, languages. Who could survive in this diverse world without knowing some type of foreign language? By taking a foreign language, students not only learned French, German, Spanish or Latin, they also learned about diverse cultures.

Spanish for Fluent Speakers, a new class, and Spanish V heard a speaker from The OAS. "Senor Belt was a vibrant speaker who really made an impression on students because like so many hispanics, he left his native country, Cuba, for political reasons and had to start a whole new language from scratch in the U.S. It was great to see how far someone can come because they are bilingual," said Spanish teacher Ms. Frances Gabor.

Initially eight students signed up for AP French V, taught here and at Falls Church and Herndon on closed-circuit TV. However, by October only senior Claudine Ebeid remained and Mr. Grover Vincent taught her duing his IPR.

French students went to Woodbine Retirement Community and sang holiday songs to the residents. Junior Jennifer Mullins said, "I really enjoyed singing in French at the retirement home. A French woman who lived there sang along with us."

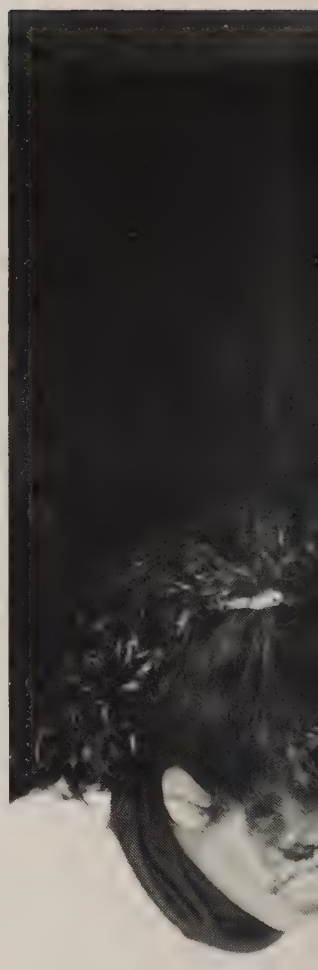
Class Reveals Reality

Hands-on experience provided



What do you do when you are babysitting and the baby starts screaming or the oven explodes? What do you do if you cannot stand the people around you? You take a home economics class.

Peer Helping students learned how to help people with many different needs. The second year students went to Woodley Hills Elementary school and helped the children with problems they were having. First year students went to Riverside Elementary and tutored students.

"The Peer Helping class involved class discussions, writing journals and cooking on special occasions. We also had a buddy system which brought us together," said senior Hastana Rasouly.

Two related classes, Relationships and Contemporary Living, helped students learn how to get along with each other in different environments. To show students the pleasures and pitfalls of living on their own, Mrs. Sharon Nagelhout paired students with a roommate and gave them simulated jobs. Once salaries were compared with expenses, students saw the need to budget their money.

Child Development students focused their attention on children and their many different developmental stages. As they learned more about children, they also gained insight into their own childhood experiences. "Learning about how kids behave and why they behave in certain ways kind of lets you understand their needs a little more," said junior Rob Pezold.

Gourmet Foods students got to taste the results of their learning experiences on a weekly basis. "Even though we have to clean up after ourselves, I really enjoy the food we cook," said sophomore Ed Robinson.

Computing Numbers

Math provides formulas for future success

Arithmetic: a three year requirement or a cruel and unusual punishment? Equations, calculations, factors and square roots faced students for 47 minutes a day. The long and involved problems meant insanity to some and challenge to others. "I understand math; I just don't like it," said junior Candace Bryan.

Math teachers strove to keep their students' attention during class. Ms. Connie Johnson's Trigonometry classes participated in equation relays for extra credit. Innovation helped ensure that students learned their theorums and formulas. Senior Becky Smith said, "I always loved math, until I got to Calculus."

Personal and financial math provided an alternative to higher math and taught practical real world skills such as balancing a check book and ordering from a catalogue.

Students looked forward to the monthly break from regular routine when they went to the math computer lab. Graphing and solving equations became easy. Junior Beeky Cullum said, "I really hate graphing equations, so I really love going to the computer lab; it graphs everything for me."

Technology

A sign of changing times came to the math department in the form of the electronic classroom. Through the use of a fax-machine, television cameras and microphones Herndon and Mt. Vernon joined together to provided BC Calculus and thus allowed two small groups to keep their classes.

Students greeted the new program with mixed feelings. Senior Daniell Bull said, "It's a good program because it provides students with an opportunity to take more specialized courses, however I don't know if it's worth all the money that has gone into it." Despite any ambiguous feelings about it, the computerized classroom proved to be a new chapter in learning technology.

As sophomores Robert Anderson and Andre Tanks get ready to go after the ball, PE teacher Mr. Randy Slack throws it out to see who could get to the it first. Mr. Slack did this as a regular routain for a warm-up before playing football.

In Advanced PE, sophomore Chris Barker lifts weights. Barker, who played JV basketball took weight training to help him stay fit out of season.

Physical Education provides fun and fitness

Oh no! Dressing out, again. Getting into those sweaty, smelly t-shirts and shorts did not appeal to most freshmen and sophomores. "I really don't like those ugly uniforms, but I would rather wear them so I don't mess up my clothes," said freshman Penny Parsons.

Even though many groaned and complained about PE, the sophomore activities such as archery, dance, tennis and volleyball, sparked up life and the interest of the sophomores. "I liked some of the things we did in PE. I'm not saying they were all great, but some were actually fun," said sophomore Kevin Thomas.

The units the freshmen participated in, such as track and field, dance, gymnastics, and CPR, which also taught the Heimlich maneuver, could hardly have been described as dull.

Second quarter sophomores began to take Drivers' Education, taught by Mr. Randy Slack, which they had to pass to get their drivers' licenses. In freshman health students learned about drug and alcohol abuse and sex education.

Weight Training and Conditioning, offered as an elective, helped students train for sports and improve their physical fitness. Ms. Chris Leis, PE teacher and head trainer said, "Athletes who took weight training tended to have fewer sports injuries."

Although eveybody groaned about dressing out, PE did provide an active alternative to the more sedentary academic courses.

Outlining the map, sophomore James Jackson adds the finishing touches, while sophomore Latee Waters adds more clipped information. Earth Science involved group work for projects.

At Lewes, Delaware, senior Todd Denick does a plankton tow. Students used the plankton tow to catch microscopic animals for later study when they returned to the classroom.

Honors Program

When the National Institutes of Health announced its sixth program of Summer Research Awards for High School Students, seniors Ali Huffman, Gazala Ansari and junior Tranae Jones received nominations. This program provided a $2000 stipend in exchange for two months work. Huffman received a summer grant, while Jones gained a spot in a weekend program.

"I plan to pursue a career in science so I think its important that I take many advanced science classes while I'm in high school. I've also entered some science research programs for the summer so that I'm certain that science is what I want to do later in my life," said Jones.

With map in hand, sophomore Tara Whittington looks for mountainous areas in Virginia. Whittington took Earth Science to learn about all the aspects of the planet Earth.

Mapping the Future

Experiments develop skills

What future value could this science class possibly have? Numerous sthdents asked this question. Junior Candace Bryan said, "Science is really important to me because I'm planning on becoming a pediatrician. I don't think I'd be allowed to operate on anyone if I hadn't taken any science classes."

In Earth Science students learned to read different maps and studied rocks. On Dec. 9 Mr. Robert McKeever required his students to view the total lunar eclipse and then write a poem about the experience.

Biology students learned about living things and the development of humans. Students faced the task of dissecting fetal pigs and having to identify each body part. "Dissecting the earthworm was so disgusting, I made my partner do all the work," said sophomore Laura Harbour.

Chemistry required students to have taken Algebra II. "There are many formulas we use. Once I'm used to them, another one is introduced and I have to adjust to that one also," said sophomore Barrett Hill. Before the winter break, Mrs. Harmon's classes made peanut brittle and candy canes.

Once most students had taken their required two years in science, they felt relieved to stop, but some delved into more advanced courses such as AP Chemistry, AP Biology II and Physics. Astronomy and Oceanography offered two more options.

Senior Chy Eare said, "Science to me is a challenging subject. I'm presently taking Bio II and PSSC Physics. Both require much studying; however, both are enjoyable." On Oct. 8, the Bio II classes went to Lewes, Delaware where they collected different specimens, brought them back to school to study.

Along with math and English, science served as an important path to future careers. Sochenda Dan, 11

Projects Aid Learning

Guests and teachers bring history to life

Taking social studies classes helped students learn about the world around them. Psychology and sociology allowed students to probe minds. Latin American and African American Studies let students explore foreign countries. "I am glad I took government class. It really helped me understand the election process better," said senior Dan Bull.

In celebration of Hispanic Heritage Month, from September 15 to October 15, US History classes heard a discussion on "Hispanics in the Media" presented by Ms. Sandra Marquez, a journalist from "Hispanic Link." World Studies heard a presentation on, "Land and Culture of Puerto Rico," by Mrs. Diana Brent and saw an art display on Latin American Art on September 29.

"Taking US/VA History really helped my study skills as well as helping me learn more about the history of the state I live in," said junior Claire Hiebert.

"I did my report for World History class on the Salem witch trials. Now I understand how horrible and crazy things really were at that time," said freshman Bethany Pavel.

Psychology classes brought blankets, pillows and stuffed animals with them to school to help them fall asleep in a project on dream interpretation.

In African Studies Mrs. Regina Williams taught her students about the customs and culture of the African people. The students studied art work as well as watched videos. The class did a presentation on Africa in the Little Theatre on January 11, 12 and 13.

Studying the past provided students with insight and knowledge about how to handle their future. Karen Jupiter 12

Doing It With Style

Classes help students prepare for future

Classes students take in high school can prepare them for the future. Students took advantage of the courses that would help them with career plans.

"I took photography because I enjoy taking pictures and I am interested in a career in that field," said senior Hastana Rasouly. In photography, students perfected their picture taking skills and learned how to develop their film. Students also made displays to show off their work.

Freshmen Oliver Sharpe and Beata Dobrocsi, sophomore Mike Makara and senior William Malerich all won awards in the photography category of the "Reflections" contest. Sophomore Mike Makara said, "I enjoy photography because I'd like to follow in my father's footsteps by working in the photography field."

Technical drawing and engineering students designed blueprints of houses, cars and bridges and exhibited their projects in the main lobby display case. Junior Doug Locke said, "I took the class because I need the engineering skills we learn to prepare me for my career."

In Auto Mechanics, taught by Mr. Dick Shaffer, students learned to fix cars from one to three periods a day. As major projects, they completely restored both a '39 Ford and a Sprint car.

Guys and girls who enjoyed doing people's hair enrolled in Cosmetology. Students learned how to cut hair, give facials and do their nails by practicing on both people and mannequins.

Not all students took their courses here. Some, like senior Nick Pelehaty traveled to Edison for classes such as Electronics, Bricklaying, Hotel Management and Nursing.

Taking these classes gave students an extra edge on their careers, since they completed the courses with skills that would help them in the future. Georgina Rivera, 11

In Cosmetology, junior Chatana Owens works on a pin curl set during class. Cosmetolgy allowed students to express new and different beauty trends for other students to admire.

Every day from 8:30 to 10:00 a.m. and 12:00 to 1:30 p.m. students and others from the community could come in and get their hair shampooed and styled for only five dollars. Students provided services such as hair coloring or lightening, manicures, chemical waves and relaxers and facials. Senior citizens received a 50% discount. Before students made an appointment, they had to get permission from their parents, subschool principal and teachers whose classes they missed.

Adjusting her compass, junior Debbie Donchatz checks to see if her circle is percise. Students drew out a rough draft of their projects and then constructed it to look three dimensional.

No two people can claim exactly the same characteristics. The little unique things that made people different, gave life an interesting perspective. Simple differences, such as hair color or shoe size, showed the basic differences between students. Students took it upon themselves to excel in whatever field they pleased. Senior Joy Park received a $500 scholarship through The Discover Card Tribute to Young Americans. Senior Steve Smith sent college applications to Perdue and the University of Indiana by October 1. For entertainment, students went on trips, played games and spent time with their friends. Junior Sarah Pollack toured Europe for a month and a half with her family. She went to five countries. Freshmen Franky Lamberth and Jason Smith enjoyed playing games thay the made up themselves. They played tennis using baseball bats and a tennis ball. Appearance proved important to students. Sophomores Janice Barton, Katie Brucker and Amber Traci spent two weekends dying each other's hair. Even though students proved different, they could all bond together because of the basic things they shared.

Females take charge DECISIVE

Man power! Where was it? Yes that's right the senior officers were all girls! President Emily Lebron said, "Being a senior class officer holds a lot of work and responsibility, but it's all worth it because the friendships that are formed are treasures. One couldn't ask for a better group of people to share the hard times with."

Because of a new Virginia state law, the school could not organize Baccalaureate. The senior officers took on the responsibility for getting parents to plan and carry out this tradition.

Major fundraisers for the year included car washes, candy sales, T-shirt sales and senior fees. The Senior fees included $20 up front for cap and gown and invitations.

In October, Mrs. Jeanne Cangianelli replaced Ms. Regina Williams as the class sponsor, bringing the number of sponsors to three in four years. Mr. Robert Lowe had served as sponsor during the senior's freshman year.

"Being in class office for the last two years, I've had the opportunity to work with a wonderful group of people. Our junior year was tough because we had the responsibility of organizing prom and homecoming," said Heather Traci, secretary/treasurer.

Lebron, Traci and Vice-president Jill Barret had all been in office for two years.

Only Senators Mandy Sahay and Denise DeJesus were newly elected.

"It takes a lot of responsibility to be an officer of any class. With all the hard work, the things you share will never be forgotten," said Barrett. Christina Short, 9

CHOICES

George Bush or Bill Clinton? Seniors pondered this question when they had to do five hours of volunteer work for government classes. To show their support, Erin McLaughlin and Rick Garber did phone banking for Clinton, while Megan Thomas and Kim Ahern worked over 50 hours combined for Bush.

Even seniors who could not vote had strong opinions. Heather Ripley said, "Governor Clinton is the right choice for people because he isn't closed minded on the social and economic issues that need to be dealt with."

However, Mary Flaherty said, "Bush represents the morals that America attains. The economy should not be blamed on Bush; it's the American people who are responsible for it."

In September, independent candidate Ross Perot rejoined the race. Supporting Perot's decision Tony Lawrence said, "I hope he wins the election because Bush has run this country into the ground. Clinton wants quick drastic changes that will put this country into shock."

Since seniors were soon going to have to face the real world, they felt the need to take action in this year's presidential election. Sochenda Dan, 11; Georgina Rivera, 11

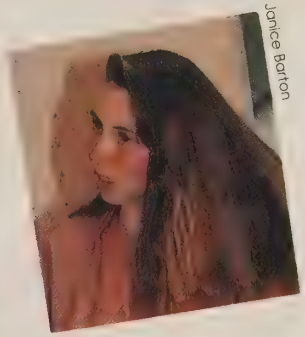
Preparing took hours

STYLING



Janice Barton

"It took me a long time to get ready for my senior portrait. I had to pick out the right clothes and do my hair perfectly," said Wendy Weaver.

"It was way too early and too far to go on a free afternoon," said Amanda Brown of the day that seniors had looked forward to since their freshman year. Seniors felt a definite change in the school as they glided across the floor in their spiffed heels and shined shoes.

Seniors held their heads high. Each strand of hair was unique but exactly placed; offending zits had been "oxycuted."

On August 12, 13 and 14, photographers posed each student in a formal yearbook photo and a cap and gown pose. Those who chose to pay extra, got casuals. Chantel Holloway felt that she should have had more choices for the backgrounds, but the desire for a perfect portrait lingered.

Although Angel Sepulveda and over 150 others didn't show up in August, they got a second chance on September 24 and 25. Sepulveda said, "I wish the negatives would come with the pictures so I can make more copies myself."

The 33 students who missed both in-school opportunities had two choices: travel to Woodson HS or be left out of the yearbook. Michael Green and Nathan Wright made the trek to Woodson. Green said, "Getting my senior portrait in the yearbook is very important to me. I had to travel all the way to Fairfax to get it taken, but it was worth it."

When photos arrived, seniors had proof that they had transformed into sophisticated adults. Melissa Dorman, 10; Tara Whitman, 10

Funds seem allusive

COUNT

Got to have it! But how? With the tight economy, students struggled to get needed money without generous parents, jobs provided the only legal answer.

Lucky students secured summer jobs. However, parking permits, senior fee and lunches quickly ate away at summer savings. Lee Frazier said, "I don't understand why parking at a public school is so expensive. What's next? Paying for sitting at a desk?"

Carl Chambers said, "With lunch prices so high, they should allow those who play sports to get a discount price."

Students opened banking and savings accounts. Keeping money out of sight made it harder to spend, but money machines provided emergency cash. Caroline Henderson said, "Earning money is hard for me. When I have money in my pocket, it tickles me and I've got to spend it. But, by being selfish and sacrificing many things I wanted, I saved a lot."

Getting money proved hard, but holding on to it seemed even harder. John Morgan, 12

To make sure he doesn't overdraw his account, Daniell Bull balances his checkbook. A $15 overdraft charge could put a big dent in a student's budget.

Needing a little extra cash, Tonya Plinsky withdraws money from her account at Burke and Herbert. Students under 18 needed parental approval to have a checking account.

Turning a new leaf

CHANGES

With the start of the new school year, students encountered new teachers, new students and went through new experiences.

New seniors suffered more than most, since they left behind old friends and traditions. They also found it strange to graduate with new people who had been total strangers at the beginning of the year.

"Changing schools during senior year is difficult. I left many friends behind, but the students at Mount Vernon have been really nice and have made me feel as though I have been here forever," said Elizabeth Wolfe.

Getting involved in sports and club activities helped seniors get acquainted. Brian Carty said, "It was tough leaving all my friends behind, but since I decided to do band I met a lot of people. And because of band camp, I made a lot of friends before school started and that really helped."

It wasn't as hard for seniors, like John Morgan, who transferred from close-by schools. "Its strange coming from Edison High to Mount Vernon. For the first time I have different teachers. Mount Vernon has a lot more school spirit than Edison."

Renee Roper came back to her old friends in September. Roper attended Mount Vernon during her freshman and sophomore years. She left her junior year to attend The New School in Maryland.

For some people, going to a new school served as a way to make new friends and to just start out fresh. For others, it proved hard, but the new seniors managed to pull through. Barbara O'Leary, 11

Animals become companions

FUZZIES

Cats, dogs, birds, hamsters and even reptiles served as surrogate friends. Jessica Barton said, "My dog is one of my closer friends. He loves to play catch with a softball."

Pets ranged from dogs to iguanas. Chad Williams had four geckos. He received them as a Christmas present his freshman year. Kesha Lowe had a two year old dove named Nikki.

College meant saying good-bye to their animals. "Since I have had my lizard for eight years, I will miss him very much when I go away to college," said Ruth Monk.

As Diane Ferguson holds her gerbil, it walks around and tickles her hand. Ferguson's menagerie included a rabbit, a chicken and a dog.

Animals also proved troublesome. Tony Henderson's mother gave away his Golden Retriver named Phoenix because it became too much to handle. Hollin Heineman's got rid of her rat when it escaped from its cage, went to the neighboring cage and ate her mouse.

Toni Collins and Matt Ferreira wanted to have pets, yet their parents wouldn't allow them.

Pets even provided wake-up calls of a sort. Alyssa Gulino said, "In the morning our rabbit greets us outside the door. He runs around our feet over and over again. He's so cute."

Whether fuzzy or scaley, miniscule or humongeous, pets provided close companionship. Karen Jupiter, 12

"When I'm in a bad mood or things aren't going my way. I buy something for myself. Shopping has a way of lifting my spirits," said Kimberley Lowe.

Girls are often stereotyped as "shopaholics" and guys are thought of as shopping illiterates. Well, that just wasn't true.

Guys went to the mall just as often as girls did. When they did not go to shop, they went to check out the "chicks" who did. "I am most comfortable shopping at the mall, because I like the attractions and the views, females," said Michael Mittendorff.

Believe it or not, the mall scene didn't entice everyone. "I really don't like going to the mall. I am most comfortable shopping for groceries," said Nancy Estrada. Groceries? Of course! Students helped out their parents by doing some of the shopping for them. That's another form of shopping. Shopping, a broad topic, didn't mean the mall for everyone.

Seniors did some major shopping in the Career Center. Here they hunted for colleges or jobs. Most agreed that this was the most difficult form of shopping, because they couldn't try on what they wanted to see which one fit the best. Finding the perfect college or career took hours.

From heater socks to bow ties, the clothes they wore were unique. "When I go shopping, I try to buy something that represents my personality and something that enables me to say, that's mine," said Woo Hyong Lee.

Weekends provide pleasure

"I often have to watch my little brother on the weekend. I don't mind babysitting because it gives me time to relax and remember what it was like to be his age," said Tammer Longmire

It's 2:10, the bell rings, heads rise, eyes open and the hoards make a mad rush for the doors. BMW's, Jeeps, and Volkswagon vans roll out of the parking lot. It's the weekend!

Students came alive when they heard the last bell of the week. "I like the weekends because it gives me time to shop, go out with friends and sleep," said senior Wendy Weaver.

The free time on the weekends allowed seniors to unwind in a variety of ways. Students worked, played and just had fun. "I go clubbing and ride around in a cool Camaro all weekend," said Rick Garber.

Everyone didn't party all weekend. Some students had to face the dreaded four letter word, work. Mandy Sahay spent some time working on the weekends, "When I'm not hanging out with friends, I help my mother file papers for her business." Working wasn't as bad as it sounds. Seniors found that having a job helped them manage their time a little better.

Seniors enjoyed the weekends a little more than underclassmen. It didn't have to be a weekend spent bungee jumping or sky diving. Seniors spent memorable weekends with their friends and family. "My cousin Tangie Golston and I get a chance to get away from school life and roll out to the District for a weekend of fun," said Zakia Jackson.

Helpers brighten bleachers

PAINTED

"The best of MV class of '93 shines again! The bleacher painting party ended in Mount Vernon having the best looking bleachers in many years," said Emily Lebron.

Bright and early on August 24, the seniors gathered together on the football field to demonstrate their spirit by painting the bleachers.

To maximize participation, the class officers tried to contact everyone by phone. They let students know the day and time the painting would begin.

However, not all seniors could come. "I was a little disappointed that I couldn't go because of work, but I heard it was fun and we had a good turn out," said Heather Traci.

As the seniors worked hard to achieve their goal, they had fun. "I dunked my hands in two buckets of paint and made handprints across the track," said Jill Barrett.

The participating students who worked hard will carry these memories with them when they leave. Amanda Maier, 12

Jobs bring responsibility

CHARGE

Karen Jupiter

"I have two jobs. I work at Talbot's and at Meadowbrook Stables in Maryland," said Becky Smith.

During high school you met new people, made new friends, studied harder and prepared for college. Parents began saying, "You want it; you pay for it."

Some students chose jobs that related to their future career plans. Russell Bowden who teaches at World Karate, wanted to be a karate teacher.

Anthony Davis, who plans a career in business, secured an internship with Student Loan Marketing. He said, "This helped me learn all aspects of business."

Even if seniors got jobs to obtain money, they found they could have fun while they worked. Lelo Saada,who worked as a sales clerk, said, "Excitement and a lot of fun is what you'll get at the MV Gift Shop."

Others, however, found their jobs tiresome. Guy Rudolph, who worked at Pizza Hut, said, "Work gets kind of routine after awhile." Bobby Shelton also worked at Pizza Hut.

Jobs varied from the ordinary to the unusual. Mike Jerecki scooped ice cream at Baskin Robbins while Kristina Mares worked at Old Town Veterinary Hospital.

Between school, extracurricular activities and their jobs, students had trouble balancing their time. Valrie Cole said, "In the beginning I didn't have much time for anything, but later I balanced my time."

Having a job not only gave the students money to spend, it directed them to the real world since it gave them a sense of responsibility. Georgina Rivera, 11; Sochenda Dan, 11

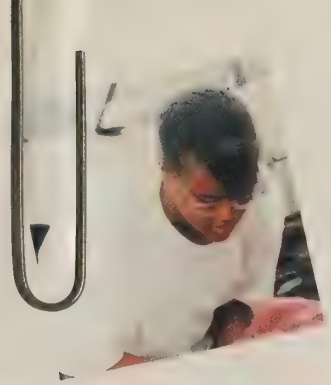
Work needed to find future SEARCH



"In order for your essay to stand out, it must be unique and interesting," said Ms. Lisa O'Conner to her senior English classes. A unit on personal essays helped students prepare for the college application process.

Seniors really felt the pressure as the application deadlines loomed closer. Vivian Luu got an early start on her applications because "some of the essay questions are really difficult and I want to take my time to get them just right." Essays could be the deciding factor between two students with equal qualifications; students tried to personalize their essays.

Students visited campuses to make deciding easier. "I went to visit Virginia Intermont on one of their open-house weekends. It really showed me a lot about campus life and helped me make the decision to apply there," said Annika Levy.

The Career Center brought in college representatives to talk to students. This proved important for students who could not make campus trips. The Computer College Search allowed students to enter characteristics they wanted in a college into a computer and the computer came up with a list of schools that fit the students' needs. Katie Chase said, "I really didn't know where to start; the Computer Search Program gave me a list of ideas."

All the pressure and all the excitement involved in applying to college kept seniors busy for most of the fall.

Seniors shout to victory

GLOWING

Throughout the year, seniors expressed their spirit in different ways. During spirit week, they participated by wearing their clothes backwards and being someone else's twin for a day. At the end of the week, students wore school colors to show off their pride in the school.

"Our spirit has really gone down this year. Not all students pulled together like they should have," said Valerie Cole. The biggest problem during Homecoming was getting seniors together to help out their class.Only a handful of seniors showed up to work on projects.

In the end, seniors pulled together for spirit week to put their effort and hard work into making their last Homecoming memorable. "Homecoming activities were hard work, but fun too," said Amy Edwards.

Students came together on a busy school night to decorate the subschool. "It was great to see all of our creative talent come together for one more time to produce a well decorated sub-school," said Ray Britt

By putting forth hard work and dedication, the senior class proved that when people pull together, in the end the job gets done. Amanda Maier, 12

Sharing and being together

BONDING

As seniors prepared for college or future jobs, they knew they could turn to their family for support.

Some had parents who worked in school. Megan Thomas' mother, Diane Thomas served as junior class secretary, while Kevin Cotter's mother, Barbara Cotter worked in the main office.

Kris Berzins, whose stepmother Debby Berzins taught history, said, "She has been a good influence on me because she'll check up on how I'm doing and sometimes talks to my teachers more than I do."

Twin brothers Matt and Luis Ferreira, played in a band called Happy Hour. Ben and his sophomore brother Pete Harris both played basketball. Ben Harris said, "Most people don't get along with their brothers, but Pete and I get along real well."

However, disagreements did occur. "Even though Amy and I have our differences, we usually get along. But every now and then, there's the occasional argument," said Tonya Plinsky.

Cousins, nephews, nieces, uncles and aunts could be found in the halls. Lihn Tranh drove her junior niece Chi Luong to school everyday. Angel and Jeniffer Sepulveda were cousins. Angel Sepulveda said, "I always look forward to seeing my cousin, because I usually don't see her during school."

COUPLES

"As we've gotten older through the years and we've learned more about the people in our class, our relationships tend to last longer because we know what we want," said Emily Lebron.

While many students preferred to date within their class, some prefered to date an underclassmen or someone out of school. A student who wished to remain anonymous said, "Since I'm a senior, I usually date people outside of school because there's less pressure from all my friends judging him."

Trust became very important in a relationship. "I like seeing the guy I'm seeing now, because he's understanding and I can trust him," said Dawn Richter.

Weekends gave couples the time to be together. Being miles apart made it hard for couples. "Long distance relationships are hard," said Katie Chase. She dated Paul Callen who had moved to Illinois. Even though they were miles apart, they still kept in touch.

"The key to love is patience, understanding and being able to admit when you're wrong," said Bobby Bradeen.

However, Kim Butz said, "The key to love is being best friends." Barbara O'Leary, 11

Officers take the lead

PILOTING

Stachea Bridges

"Being a junior officer has been a lot of work as well as a lot of fun. Planning Homecoming and Prom was also more work than I expected. Our only hope is that everyone who attended Prom and Homecoming enjoyed themselves and will remember it for a long time," said Deirdre Johnson.

Who kept the junior class together and made sure everything ran smoothly? Class officers did as they also tried to make the year fun, successful and one to remember.

President Deirdre Johnson led the junior class with the help of vice-president Gia Gulino, secretary/treasurer Michele Parsons and senators Chelsi Hayden and Kim Ashton.

Returning officers found it tougher than previous years since they had to plan Homecoming and Prom. Gulino, vice-president for the past three years, said, "This year was harder because we were making decisions for the whole school, not just our class."

Not only did officers return, but the junior class sponsor, Mrs. Sharon Nagelhout stayed loyal as well. Nagelhout said, "The Class of 94 has had excellent leadership from the beginning. They are sensitive to their fellow classmates' ideas. Most of all, they carry out and see events through to the finish. They've been a joy to work with."

Officers found time for other activities. Gulino and Parsons marched in the band, Hayden ran track, Johnson played basketball and Ashton participated in the Spanish Club and National Honor Society.

Spirit formed unity in the junior class, which made the officers' job easier. Hayden said, "Our class has great spirit and I enjoy representing it." Georgina Rivera, 11

Time for some fun

MEMORIES

Traditions provided both horrendous and enjoyable memories for juniors. The SAT and PSAT showed students the real meaning of stress. "When I was finished with my PSAT I felt like my head had just exploded. I just can't wait for the SAT," said, Stachea Bridges.

October 6 brought a symbol of maturity, class rings. "When I received my class ring it was a very exciting moment in my high school years. My ring was also different from everybody elses, which made it even more enjoyable," said Kevin Brown.

The juniors also ran both Prom and Homecoming. The juniors broke homecoming traditions when they eliminated the class call and float competitions. Michelle Parsons said, "We decided to just have one float instead of four because we thought it would bring unity between the students in all classes."

Prom was held at the Springfield Hilton on May 14 so that it would not conflict with Memorial Day. After hours of careful planning and decorating, students danced the night away and gathered memories of one of the most traditional high school rites of passage. Ray Turner, 11

Learning a new language in school can be hard, but it's much harder to go to a country where everyone speaks that language. "But it doesn't bother me," said junior Annika Koli, a foreign exchange student from Finland. "I just have a funny accent. The vocabulary is big in English."

Even though they received no credit for the year, three exchange students visited the US to learn more about American culture. Australian Pam Honey was surprised by how Americans acted. "The Americans aren't the party animals you see portrayed on TV," she said.

Lars Bakken from Norway was suprised that girls wear so much make up and that they put it on in class. "In Norway no girls wear skirts or dresses, even though they care how they look," he said. "In Norway," said Bakken, "people aren't as polite as they are here. We call our teachers by their first name and we don't say 'please' and 'thank you' as often. When we bump into somebody or burp we don't apologize."

"It is confusing being away from home. There are times when I miss home, but I don't want to give up being here," said Koli.

"It's very hard," said Bakken. "I miss my friends very much and I look forward to returning home. But I'm here now and I want to make the best of it, since my parents aren't here and my grades don't matter." Jennifer Saks, 9

STORAGE

"If it wasn't for my locker I wouldn't make it through the day having to carry all my books around," said Mike Robinette. Lockers served as relief for students with a heavy load.

Posters, pictures and mirrors brightened up students' lockers. Angie Bowers and Melissa Von Arb featured friends' pictures. Von Arb said, "I decorated my locker because I think they are rather plain. It is also nice to see my friends smiling at me when I open the door."

However, Tranae Jones said, "I used to decorate my locker freshman year but I don't anymore because I find that pictures and posters fall down or get smashed when I close the door."

Conditions of lockers ranged from neat to messy. Wesley Peterson had trouble finding his books for class while Barbara O'Leary found them with ease. O'Leary said, "I don't care what my locker looks like as long as it's neat and I can find my books."

Whether neat, messy, decorated or plain, students relied on lockers.

DRIVING

"Driving was cool in the beginning, but it got to be a hassle after a while. It's good in the fact that I can go whereever I want and I don't have to depend on my parents or my friends," said Jon Gibb.

When you were little you dreamt of driving and now here you are! After waiting since kindergarten, you've finally gotten your license.

Driving gave students a sense of adulthood, more freedom and more convenience. "I have a lot of rehearsals to go to after school. So now, it's easier to stay later," said Beeky Cullum.

Along with a license came responsibilities. Those with jobs found it easier to pay for gas and cars repairs. "I don't like asking my parents for money, so I'm glad that I have a job and can pay for things myself," said Kristin Phillips.

Students obtained driving machines in different ways. "My parents bought a new car for themselves, but they're letting me call it mine until I graduate," said Natasha Tomasi. Carrie Vuori and Susan Jackson received convertibles, a Mustang and a Camaro, for their birthdays. Jeremy Fletcher saved up his money and purchased a car. Rob and Kyle Pezold shared the family car.

Parking and speeding tickets provided the downside to driving, but that didn't spoil the fun. Driving brought both pleasure and responsibilities. Jennifer Mullins, 11

Age brings responsibility

MATURE

"I hate that my birthday is so late in the year because I was one of the last juniors to turn 16," said Stachea Bridges whose birthday was in October.

Turning 16 brought new responsibilities and experiences. Juniors no longer relied on older siblings or friends to give them a ride since they were now able to drive. "Having a license gives me more freedom; I no longer have to rely on my parents to chauffeur me around," said Tasha Tomasi.

The thrill of being 16 wore off quickly. Dennis Morris said, "I waited so long for my 16th birthday. When it finally came and I got my license it wasn't as exciting as I had thought it would be. Now I'm waiting to turn 18."

Even though students preferred to spend their 16th birthday with their friends, Chi Luong spent hers with her family in New Jersey. Luong said, "You only turn 16 once and it was nice to be with my family on this occasion."

No matter where people spent birthdays or who they spent them with, 16th birthdays were ones to remember. Georgina Rivera, 11

Hobbies help pass the time

INVOLVE

"I think everyone needs a hobby. You can concentrate on what you think is fun and put all the more stressful things on hold. Hobbies are a way to enjoy your free time doing something that you feel is both satisfying and worthwhile," said Chrissy Sterling, who enjoyed horseback riding at Woodlawn Stables.

Juniors enjoyed a diverse range of hobbies. Robert Pezold collected house blueprints while his twin sister Kyle collected scrunchies for her hair. Jonathan Kimball preferred reading a good book. Kimball said, "Reading is like becoming one with the characters. It's kind of a psychic zen thing, being one with a book."

Activities at school provided students with a chance to spend extra time enjoying their hobbies. Melody Westmeyer liked to run in her spare time and participated on the track team. Westmeyer said, "I don't have much time for a worthwhile hobby, but when I get a chance I like to run or bike on the George Washington Parkway."

Aundray McAllister enjoyed playing basketball, but did not play on the school team. "I like to play basketball because I like to score and dunk over people," said McAllister.

During the homecoming pep rally, Candy Washington and Chi Luong practiced their favorite hobby, dancing. They showed their talents in the dance performed in the skit. Washington said, "Dancing is fun. I love the competition and advantages that come along with dancing being my hobby."

Whether for relaxation or keeping fit, hobbies kept the junior class occupied when they weren't in school. Georgina Rivera, 11

"I enjoy volunteering because I am able to change a person's life, hopefully for the better. I get a good feeling when I realize I have an impact on other people's lives," said Natasha Tomasi. Along with Tomasi and others, Angela Rathbone and Temperance Walker volunteered at Mount Vernon Hospital.

Generally students felt good about volunteering. "I liked working as a volunteer for DECA in the hurricane relief and I think it was a really good experience," said Melody Westmeyer.

However Alan Johnson disagreed by saying, "A lot of people say a warm feeling inside is payment enough, but after volunteering to work with a youth group, I would prefer cash."

Fashion provides identity

VOGUING

Remember when you were a kid and your parents dressed you in "not so cool" clothes? And every time you looked at all those pictures of you as a kid, they made you laugh and wonder "Why?" "I remember when I was a kid, my parents dressed me in the weirdest outfits," said Claire Heibert.

Fashions changed through the years and while some said that they didn't change fast enough, others thought differently. "Fashions change frequently and it's important to keep up with them, but always have your own original style," said Danielle Julia.

Students tended to wear many styles of clothing. Some felt it was better to be different and original than trendy and a follower. "I like to think I have a style of my own. I don't really follow the trends. I just wear what I think looks neat. I like to look good, but I don't want to look like everyone else. Fashion is all about looking different," said Gia Gulino.

Music is known as the universal language as fashion is the universal way of expression. "Fashion is all in your head; it's what you like and not what other people want. A sense of fashion is your attitude towards life," said Jen Mullins.

Fashion trends spanned the globe. "The girls in Norway don't wear make-up, skirts or dresses even though they're really concerned about how they look and if a popular guy buys a new jacket or something, the whole school has bought that jacket by the end of the week," said Lars Bakken.

Wherever one looked, students modeled fashionable styles. Though they might not look great on everyone, they set trends. Barbara O'Leary, 11

Officers play weighty role

LEADERS

From fundraising to Homecoming, the officers of the Class of '95 pulled together and led their class through their sophomore year. "I felt that our class officers did a great job in representing the sophomore class," said Judy McGuire.

Budgeting their time between extracurricular activities and homework, the officers tried to uphold their duties. Senators Mike Jones and Rebecca Jeffreys served on the Principal's Advisory Council as well.

Early in the year, the class received a new sponsor, former senior class sponsor Mrs. Regina Williams. The new sponsor's past experience helped the sophomores in all of their activities.

Homecoming proved to be a major part of the officer's duties. Their theme, the year 2000, provided a challenge for the officers. Ricky Woo said, "Our subschool decorations, I felt, were better than our freshman decorations." Class president, Noah Kaufman, was proud of the way the events turned out.

New elections had to be held at the beginning of the year when two of the elected officials moved. Students campaigned and Tammy Duricka was elected Secretary-Treasurer and Rebecca Jeffreys was elected Senator.

Last minute changes began the year for the sophomores, but in the face of open positions, the officers pulled together for the year.

"I think our class officers do a great job of representing our views and ideas to the school," said Aisha Brown.

Take a break and chill

RELAX

During the long vigorous school week, sophomores' daily schedules became either hectic or monotonously boring. They needed a place to relax or just hang out.

Since most sophomores couldn't drive yet, they hung out at local places such as Taco Bell, which opened on December 5, McDonalds and Wendy's. They also found school activities to be a great way to unwind.

The worst slump came midweek. Edmond Ebeid said, "Lately the weekly hangout for a bunch of people, has been Young Life, a place that people of all grades from our school can go to take a break from school work and just chill."

Everyone anticipated the weekend. Students never made definite plans; they cared only that they spent time with friends. Heidi Kelly said, "I like going places with small groups of friends like the mall, miniature golf, and the movies."

Goofing around could sometimes cause trouble. Adam Hughes said, "My friends and I don't really stay at one place for too long because people get angry and ask us to leave."

Wherever sophomores hung out, they had a chance to let go and not think about school. Sochenda Dan, 11

Hobbies roll to future PREPARE

When sophomores looked into the future, they chose classes and hobbies that helped them with their career choices. Terry Avondet, Tammy Durika and Jenny Lewis took fashion class because they felt it enhanced their creative ability. Auto mechanics provided away for Mike Hamel, Mike Havenner and Phung Hung to work with cars and gain experience.

Hobbies often became serious work. Amy Convery played the bass clarinet in the band and practiced avidly at home. Chang Yi said, "I like to build model airplanes because I have dreamed of flying since I was young." Practice, work and time went into every aspect of their hobbies.

Hobbies also provided fun. "I like to go out to the courts and play basketball in my free time," said Rob Barrie.

Similar to our ethnic diversity, interest diversity came in abundance. "My ultimate goal is to be a guitarist in a hard working metal band," said Megan Graeber. Music topped the list of hobbies. In addition to making music, students listened to it and collected tapes and CDs. Jeremiah Jourdan said, "I collect the top ten hits from the decades. My father started this hobby and now I am finishing it."

No matter how insignificant a sophomore hobby, it gave insight to the future goals of the student. Stachea Bridges, 11

Find a special someone SHARE

Looking down the hallways, you see couples holding hands, sharing a kiss and taking advantage of the six minutes between classes. Among the crowd, sophomores could be found sharing a moment with their companions.

"It is always nice to have a boyfriend, because there's always someone there when you need him," said Michelle Perdomo who dated Jeremy Threlkeld.

Movie theaters, restaurants and parties served as common places to find sophomores on a date. Sophomores searched for the perfect setting, but Sarah Boykin said, "It doesn't really matter where you go. If you're with someone special, you'll have a good time."

Sophomores often dated outside their class. Mercer Parker dated freshman Chancey Deloera while Monika Zakar went with Trevor Bopp, a Bishop Ireton junior.

Even though not yet upperclassman, sophomores displayed their own form of maturity. Ricky Woo said, "Dating is a way to enjoy yourself, but at the same time show signs of growing up." Georgina Rivera, 11

Sophomores live it up

PARTYING

Telephones rang, students applied make-up and excitement filled the air. Friday, the beginning of the weekend, had arrived! "Every weekend I usually spend time with my boyfriend. Whether it's at the movies, at a party or at the mall, as long as I'm with my boyfriend, I'm fine," said Ebony Lewis.

Because many sophomores didn't have their license, they either had to turn to their parents or upperclassmen friends for transportation.

"It's hard to get around without a license but I'm lucky because I hang out with a lot of upperclassmen that drive. It's hard to have a nightlife if you don't have any means of transportation," said Mike Jones.

A few years ago students had to use fake ID's or sneak into clubs, but now clubs exist that have designated nights where any age is permitted.

"I like going to clubs because you get to meet new and interesting people. It's also a way to get away from it all," said Trey Spilker.

Whether it was at the movies, the mall, a party or even at a club students found a way to relax and have fun. Barbara O'Leary, 11

Transportion not comfort

TRAVEL

The alarm clock goes off, you trudge into the shower, eat your breakfast and head to the bus stop.

Students had to rise early to catch busses, that arrived between 6:45 and 7:00. Chelsea Ray said, "I like riding my bus, especially when my friends ride it. The best part is my bus driver. She keeps me occupied and we talk. She knows I don't want to ride it, but I usually have to. The worst part is standing at the bus stop in the morning waiting for the bus to come."

"It's nice to be able to socialize on the bus, but I'd rather be driving my own car to school," said Megan Graeber. Waiting outside at the bus stop gave students time to talk with friends, eat breakfast and work on homework.

On cold winter days, sophomores huddled together to stay warm. "I hate standing outside in the cold and wet waiting for the bus. It isn't so bad though if my friends are there with me," said Noah Kaufman.

Sophomores who had upperclass friends could hitch a ride. "Getting a ride with my friend Angie Bowers is much better, because I don't have to get up as early," said Elaine Papoulakos.

Spirit shines like silver

INSPIRE

"When it comes to spirit, sophomores are a 10," said Jeremy Threlkeld. On October 30 the sophomores fled into the field house for the homecoming pep rally and cheered "FIGHT! FIGHT!" as loudly as they could.

Subschool posters gave sophomores the inside scoop on decorations. "A lot of people showed up to decorate the subschool which helped us place second," said Mike Jones.

"To see all those sophomores working together on decorations, doing something good was really inspiring. I wish we could get together like that more often," said Noah Kaufman.

Arranging a rocket made of aluminum foil, Sarah Boykin makes sure it looks perfect. Sophomores placed second in subschool decorations.

During spirit week sophomores showed spirit by wearing mismatched clothes on crazy day, sunglasses on beach day and school colors on Friday.

A few people thought sophomore spirit declined. "I think spirit this year stunk! I didn't see as many people participating in activities which was disappointing," said Vicki Lawerence.

After Homecoming ended, sophomores met at football and basketball games to cheer for their school. Amanda Maier, 12

Hair provides personality

TRESSES

"I don't really think about the way I do my hair. It just goes the way it goes, so long as my girlfriend likes it," said Douglas Rios.

You saw it full of vibrance and shine. You saw it every shade and color. You saw it full of volume. You saw it limp and hanging or curly and frizzy. You saw it bouncy, or once in a while standing on its ends. You saw it in a bun, or you saw it over done.

From purple to green, hair showed one of the most important factors of fashion in the sophomore class. From his hairstyle one could tell the personality of the person who sat beside him in English class. Dawn Walters said, "Having strawberry blond hair is okay, although it often gives people the impression I'm a dumb blond."

Haircuts ranged from the most carefully coiffed dos to hastily thrown together styles. Noah Kaufman said, "I try to comb it in the morning if I can. I really don't spend that much time on my hair." Some cuts consisted of shaving only a portion of the head, some involved feathering or spiking hair and some didn't involve anything at all.

Mr. Clean look alikes roamed the halls. Pete Harris, T.J. Hughes and Diego Boyd all shaved their heads for the JV Basketball Team. History teacher Mr. Jim Sparling shaved his son Jimmy's head for him.

Sophomores used picks, combs, mousse, gel, water, barrettes, rubberbands and clips to createte perfect style. Michelle Payne said "It took under an hour to get my hair perfect. Supplies included banana clips, rubberbands and a lot of hair spray."

Hairstyles let people express their style in a way that clothes couldn't. Hairstyles proved to be more like pieces of art rather than just styles. Melissa Dorman, 10

Making everything happen

COMMAND

"I wanted to be in student government to help get everything going. I like working with people and seeing that what I do makes a difference," said president Christie Carlson. Vice-president Kelly Hall and secretary/treasurer Lisa Colley also held offices.

The first challenge the officers faced arrived with Homecoming. With the '60s as their theme, the officers had the subschool covered in flowers, peace symbols and tie-dyed T-shirts.

Reading teacher Ms. Karen Erdman sponsored the class. Ms. Erdman said, "I sponsored the freshman class because of a big terrible secret; I like freshman. I teach a lot of them and I am impressed by their energy, ideas and potential."

Summing up the feelings of all the officers, senator Chris Brophy, partner with senator Jennifer Reiley, said, "I became a senator because I wanted to do something to help the class of '96." Jennifer Saks, 9

Beside senior Tom Gillard, Linh-Phung Tran decides which homeroom she's in. Once students had found the guide to their homeroom, they waited for others and then were led to their homerooms.

People held up signs. Nervous smiles flashed. Friends waved to each other. A big sign said it all: "Welcome Freshmen!"

On September 2, five days before school began, freshmen arrived at 9:30 a.m. for freshman orientation. After listening to speeches in the Little Theater, they then went to their homerooms, received their schedules and spent ten minutes in each classes.

"I couldn't wait for the speeches to end so that I could go find all my old friends and see which ones were in my classes," said Lindsey Papion. "But once I got outside the theatre, I got very lost and didn't recognize anyone."

Besides trying to find old friends, freshmen spent a lot of time lost. "I was trying to find my French class and got lost," said Andrea Sanders.

"I walked into the wrong class," said Bryan Godfrey.

Freshman orientation allowed new students to get familiar with the school and met their teachers before other students. Kevin Noble said, "I really got to know the school. Jennifer Saks, 9

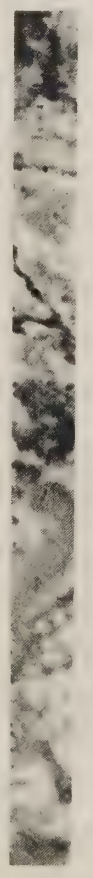
Room reflects personality

NIGHTLY



Bedrooms provided freshmen with a place to escape from the world. "My room was a secret hiding place whenever I wanted to get away," said Sabrina Rosado-Rodriguez.

Freshmen such as Christy Carlson decided to show their talent by displaying the trophies and plaques they had won for sports, music and academics. She had trophies from basketball, soccer, the Jody Pezold award, chorus, best musician and a student council award. David Ahearn and Pat Langley had football and basketball trophies, while Saurin Shah displayed those won for karate.

A favorite decor among freshmen included hanging posters of superstars such as "Boyz II Men," Michael Jordan and Edward Furlong. "I spent time in my room just thinking, when I was so bored and had nothing else to do," said Jennie Wick.

Freshmen also expressed themselves with weird and exotic furniture. Really outgoing students put couches and living room furniture in their rooms; others went with the normal decor and stuck with just a bed, stereo and the normal dresser along with stuffed animals and other furry things.

Whether cluttered and messy or neat and tidy, rooms showed each individual's personality. Antoinette Williams expressed the feelings of most when she said, "My room was like a hang out, a place to relax or think." Christina Short, 9

Sitting in his bedroom, Jay Wood plays with his dog Champ. Pets helped students relieve themselves of stress after a long day of classes and after-school activities.

Transportation modes vary

TRAVEL

If you thought getting up earlier for school was hard, freshmen who took the bus had to be at the bus stop at 6:45. "I can't wait until I turn sixteen so I won't have to ride the bus anymore," said Tae Um.

Lucky freshmen with older siblings received rides from them. "I don't know how I am going to get to school next year because my older brother Mike gives me a ride and he is graduating this year," said Aaron Dempsey. However, Mike Howes, who got a ride from his senior brother Tim, found that teachers didn't understand why he arrived late for first period.

Freshmen who lived in a mile radius had to walk to school. Justin Lucas and others toughed it out through freezing cold and pouring rain.

But walking appealed to Autumn Girouard who said, "I walk to school so I don't have to give myself up to the yellow bananas. Besides, they won't pick me up because I live so close. I can do what I want when I want to."

Siblings provide advice

COUNSEL

In the locker bank, senior Meg Kelly explains an assignment that sister Katie missed on a day she was sick. Siblings helped each other keep up with homework when they were absent.

As the low men on the totem pole, freshmen faced many hurdles. However, having an older sibling made the tough transition from junior high to high school a little easier.

Having a brother or a sister in school provided benefits. Siblings could help with a tough assignment or bring assignments home when illness struck. Catching a ride to and from school with an older sibling topped the list of advantages. "My sister Kim gave me rides to and from school so I wouldn't have to ride the bus," said David Ahearn.

Having an older or younger sibling in school may not be as good as it sounds. "I caught my brother Adam skipping one time. It was funny because he wasn't expecting it," said Alice Thomas.

When freshmen were down in the dumps, older siblings helped cheer them up and provided guidance. "I think it is easier to talk to my sister Anetra because she is the only one that will sit down and listen to what I have to say," said Roshawn Hayes. Amanda Maier, 12

Food provides pleasure SAVORY

Not that annoying noise again! Dazed freshmen rolled out of bed and realized they had pushed the snooze too many times. The clock reads 7:15. Wide awake now, they dash for the door grabbing something to wear and a little food on the way.

In the morning, freshmen consumed food on the move. "I grab an orange to take with me on the bus for breakfast or whenever I feel like eating," said Melissa Satorre.

Lunch provided a different experience since the lunch line served favorite foods such as pizza and fries. "The cafeteria here has a better selection than the school I went to before," said Todd Metheny.

Nothing could compare to the fast food served by McDonalds and Taco Bell for pit stops after school. "I can get my favorite food, McDonalds fries, after school," said Andrea Taylor. Stachea Bridges, 11

Extra study brings results

EXAMINE

As the class of 1996 entered high school, they faced many new challenges. They had to adjust to new surroundings, new people, and a load of homework. "I now have two to three hours of homework almost every single night. Somehow I manage homework and swim practice," said Kelly Osbourne.

Students found assignments, such as writing projects and book reports, more difficult than in eighth grade. Saurin Shaw said, "I find the homework in high school much more strenuous than what we did in intermediate. If you miss an assignment, it is really hard to catch up."

Doing homework with friends proved effective. Kristen Markmen said, "I do my homework the night assigned, but then at lunch my friends and I go over it and sometimes we change our answers."

The public library served as a popular place to do homework and to get away from home. Here students completed research, finished class assignments and hung out with friends.

Homework helped students for the future.

Sochenda Dan, 11

Cramming to get his homework done for next period, Chip Rhoades works on it in drama. Students crammed in an early class before they had a test or unfinished homework.

Music soothes and relaxes HARMONY

"I enjoy listening to soft music at night because it really relaxes me and makes me go to sleep," said Beata Dobrocsi. Music allowed students to retreat to another world.

Freshmen became involved through school. "I enjoy playing my violin in the school orchestra. For my inspiration I like to listen to classical music," said Amy Park.

Students also played on their own. Christina Carlson taught herself to play the flute at the age of ten. "I take private drum lessons. I enjoy playing outside of a school activity," said Jennifer Woodfine.

"I listen to certain radio stations because they play the kind of music I like to listen to," said Brian Leach. 104.1, played oldies such as Elvis and the "Beatles," 95.5 played rhythm and blues by "Boyz II Men" and Whitney Houston, 91.1 played the progressive music of "Nirvana" and "R.E.M." and 107.3 played light rock including Michael Bolton and Amy Grant.

Diana Short enjoyed listening to "Violent Femmes," her favorite group. "I have tapes of my favorite groups so I can listen to the music I want, when I want," said Grant Graeber.

Music allowed students to express their emotions and soothed them after a hectic school day. Karen Jupiter, 12

While singing with the concert choir, Roger Perry pays close attention to Mrs. Ruth McConnell. Chorus required individuals to meld themselves into a group to produce a harmonious sound.

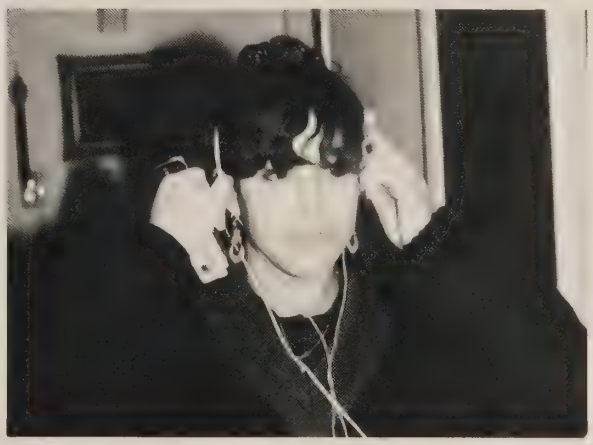
Sitting and playing her home-made flute, Chancey Deloera waits for her dad gets home. Making the instrument made music an even more personal experience.



At her house, Charisse Morales puts on her walkman before walking her dog. Students found an escape from the world by listening to their music.

People who veto your life

ADULTS

Who tells you to clean your room? Who helps you with your homework? Who drives you to the library the night before a big science report is due? Who tells you to eat your vegetables and quit feeding them to the dog? Who tells you to get off the phone late at night? For many freshmen, it's their parents.

"My parents are inquisitive; they always want to know where I am and what's going on," said Craig Jones. "But it doesn't bother me. It's just what parents do." Many students agreed with Jones that parents are supposed to be inquisitive, but they also found it annoying.

"My mother is like one of the guys," said Autumn Girouard. "She even hangs out with my friends and hates it when I call her mom." Some freshmen liked their parents and others didn't. Justin Lucas, hard pressed to think of something that he liked about his parents, finally said, "They are homo sapiens and walk on their hind feet."

Some students felt that parents favored one child more than another, but all agreed that life would be more difficult without parents to help and support them. Jen Saks, 9

While Mrs. Debbie Short helps her daughter Diane with "Romeo and Juliet," they laugh at a joke told by her father Doug. Freshmen found comfort in spending quality time at home with mom and dad.

Mike Kelly

As Stacy Kelly finishes up her homework, her parents Debra and Richard, lend a helping hand. Having a good relationship with their parents meant a great deal to freshman and parents alike.

Dressing up to teach class

POSEUR

Is it a tomato? No, it's Dr. Calanthia Tucker all dressed up as Santa Claus. Other St. Nicks included Mrs. Barbara Clark and Mr. Andy Gerard.

During Spirit Week most of the faculty wore maroon and white on Friday. On Halloween, Mr. Dave Givens filled his room with spider webs and added bat wings to his glasses, while Ms. Gayle Deaton greeted her students as a witch.

In November Ms. Priscilla Ordway, who does not usually allow hats, held "hat day" and gave students extra credit for wearing hats.

Waiting for the right moment, Mrs. Cynthia Rufty, as Lady Macbeth, gets ready to take a picture as her students tell ghost stories. Every year Mrs. Rufty dresses up for Halloween.

"I thought it was very funny and surprising when Ms. Ordway wore Mickey Mouse ears on hat day," said sophomore Jeremiah Jourdan.

Mrs. Prativa Prasad sometimes wore her traditional Indian sari. "I wore my dress because my class was doing a unit on India. It helped their attitude and information on India form. It also let them know that people in different parts of the world dress differently," said Mrs. Prasad.

Mrs. Cathy Ruffing dressed up as a colonial soldier for her American Civ class. "When my teachers wear costumes when they teach I pay more attention to them. I think it's funny," said freshman Autumn Girouard. Jen Saks, 9

In the senior fishbowl, senior Angel Sepulveda places the angel on the tree as Mrs. Jeanne Cangianelli and Mrs. Mary Jane Thorton add ornaments. Holidays provided a good excuse to wear costumes.

Wearing her Mickey Mouse hat, Mrs. Ordway lectures her class on the day's lesson. Students could not wear hats in her class, but this day was an exception.

Family Ties Prevail

CARING

Believe it or not teachers, didn't live to grade papers and create tests. When the final bell rang, teachers and staff looked forward to going home to their families.

"Families get better as they get older. My husband and I have been married for 28 years. All three of our kids went to Mount Vernon and we were always involved, but now that they have grown up, we usually only see each other on holidays," said Mrs. Judy Cook. After children had grown up and moved away, faculty found that they no longer had the close knit family they once enjoyed.

Some faculty members had a strong background at the school. Mrs. Mary Jane Thornton's five children all attended school while she was the subschool secretary. Substitute Mr. Cy Young's senior son Eric could find his father during the day.

Faculty spent their few free moments with their families. Psychology teacher Mr. Derek Steele said, "Whenever I can, I spend time with my wife and kids. So much of my time is taken up with my two jobs and coaching basketball. I like to bring my children to basketball practice sometimes; I don't want them to think that I don't want to spend time with them." Mandy Sahay, 12

Aides lighten burdens

HELPING

"Student Aides are the invaluable heart of the department. They take a large burden off of the faculty by performing important tasks so that we can concentrate on classroom teaching," said science teacher Mr. Jim Frishman.

"I enjoy knowing that I am helping a teacher do all the things that she has to do in the course of one day," said senior Karimah Smith, Mrs. Joyce Jones' aide. Student assistants performed many tasks including retrieving mail, putting up posters, carrying messages and grading quizzes.

"Being a student assistant gives me more free time. The class I had before I became an assistant had too much busy work for me," said senior Sheryl Wood. Mr. Andy Gerard and Mr. Ishia Chapman allowed their aides to work on other homework or read a book of their choice.

"Student assistants are valued helpers. They can perform a variety of important tasks, from everything to grading papers to fetch and carry," said English teacher Mrs. Jeanne Cangianelli. Karen Jupiter, 12

As senior Kelly Crews listens, Ms. Nancy Van Metre prepares the calender for the busy month of January. The Career Center became very busy in the winter months.

In Subschool II, senior Vicky Zuelke gets a message from the secretary Mrs. Maureen McArdle. If they had all the credits they needed to graduate, seniors often signed up to work as student assistants.

Varied hobbies provide fun

UNWIND

If you thought a teacher's whole life revolved around teaching, think again. Teachers relaxed in their own special ways to forget about school. "I can't decide what I enjoy most, painting or sewing. They both give me a chance to leave the school day behind me. Seven periods are long for a teacher," said English teacher Mrs. Joyce Jones.

Sewing and making quilts served as popular pastimes. English teacher Pricilla Ordway taught co-workers the art of quilting. The members of the group, hearing specialist Mrs. Barbara Firebaugh, Subschool IV secretary Mary Jane Thornton, librarian Mrs. Janet Smith and math teacher Mrs. Jackie Atkinson also enjoyed the comeraderie and the gossip.

Ordway made a quilt for the Choral Boosters to raffle off at the winter concert. "I make the quilt each year because it is giving something of myself to something I love," said Mrs. Ordway.

Mrs. Thornton's interests varied. She sewed, went antiquing, attended the theater and spent time with her twelve grandchildren. Psychology teacher Mr. Derek Steele also enjoyed spending time with his family. "Since my kids are now old enough know, I am going to take them to the amusement parks," said Derek Steele.

When it came to after-school time, nobody needed to tell teachers to "get a life." Kristina Mares, 12

Teachers take extra jobs

BALANCE

During the four years that President Bush held office, the economy plunged into a recession. Teachers found themselves looking for a second or even a third job to make extra cash.

Ms. Priscilla Ordway said, "My quilting is a teriffic creative outlet. It lets me use my love of color and texture in a wonderful way. I make gifts for family and friends and sell my quilts at craft shows."

Ms. Roberta Lerg, worked at Genesis in Potomac Square and ran an accounting service, Tax Time, out of her home. Said Ms. Lerg, "Sometimes there are not enough hours in the day to get everything done."

"My wife has run a furniture store for 17 years. I like helping her out in the store," said Mr. David Givens, who also helped by selling homemade reindeer baskets for the Biology club.

In addition to grading tests and putting up with impatient students in school, teachers also worked hard out of school to make better lives for themselves. Mike Kelly, 12

Staff keep school in order

CLEANED

"I think the custodians do a great job. The school really looks nice. I have been to other schools and none look as neat and clean as Mt. Vernon does," said sophomore Colleen Sheppard.

For the second year, Mount Vernon received the Blue Ribbon Award for having the cleanest building in Area I. Teams made random inspections of the school checking for well manicured lawns, dust free class rooms, clean hallways and tidy storage rooms.

The twenty-two member custodial staff consisted of seven day-crew members, led by Mr. Joe Piatt, 15 night workers, surpervised by assistant building superviser Larry Carpenter and 15 cafeteria workers, headed by Jane Jesinsky.

"I know that the food doesn't always taste the greatest, but I'm sure that the cafeteria workers try their best to provide a good meal," said freshman Saurin Shah. Cafeteria workers planned, cooked and served breakfast and lunch each day.

For the second year the cafeteria recycled polystyrene trays and aluminum cans. "It really makes me happy knowing that the trash I throw away isn't being wasted," said senior Sarah Robbins. Karen Jupiter, 12

For the first time the Majors had two male cheerleaders on the squad: seniors Gene Clayborne and Angel Sepulveda. Clayborne played on the varsity football team as well as being a cheerleader. Teams that brought in revenue, such as football and basketball, felt the budget cuts less than the teams that brought in no revenue, such as swimming, cross country, tennis and soccer. These teams were forced to have major fundraisers. Girls' soccer and cross country held carwashes, while softball sold candy. Juniors Jessee and Anna Barlow, the stars of the girls' tennis team, played their last season at Mt. Vernon before they moved to Texas when their father received a promotion. For only a second year, females were allowed to manage the baseball teams. Basketball had so many students that wanted to manage that they had to turn several away. The sports teams had to really learn to fend for themselves when the funding cuts were wielded upon them.

BALANCED

Varsity cheerleaders work hard to show their very best. They give the team support when the score shows a deficit and cheer the guys on during victories.

"It's a privilege to be on the squad because it's the first year that sophomores have been allowed on the Varsity Cheerleading Squad," said Zarinah Raheem. Sophomores Gina Miller, Lara Henry and Aisha Brown also gained spots on the varsity squad. Senior male cheerleaders Angel Sepulveda and Gene Clayborn and 16 junior and senior girls rounded out the squad.

Clayborn, winner of the All American Cheerleaders' Association's competition at the Hula Bowl last year, played varsity football and then cheered for basketball. Sepulveda and Clayborn helped the girls with things from stunts to jumps.

Practicing from 3:15 to 5:00 on Tuesdays and Wednesday, varsity cheerleaders worked to perfect the skills of their sport. "Cheererleaders would say that cheering is the most difficult sport, although many people don't agree," said junior Lan-Chi Dawson.

To provide the football players, basketball players and wrestlers with their school spirit, the cheerleaders shortened their social time. The cheerleaders and the Pep Squad became the fans when no one showed up at the away games.

All cheerleaders worked together. Varsity sponsor Mrs. Edna Schaeffer had varsity members serve as "big sisters" for the JV and freshman girls. They taught the girls new cheers, gave them small gifts and provided someone more experienced to talk to when the need arose. Tara Whitman, 10

FOCUSED

Whether new to the school or old hands, cheerleaders lead the school in spirit. They participate in pep rallies and raise spirit during the football games.

Neither rain nor wind or dark of night could stop them. They kept on going and going like the Energizer Bunny. Even if the team wasn't scoring, the girls in charge of spirit kept on.

JV cheerleaders practiced cheers, chants, dances and stunts on Tuesdays and Wednesdays. "I like cheering but I think we need more beat and rhythm to our cheers," said sophomore Tassie Wright. Others wanted a steady up tempo beat, but not too fast.

Stunts highlighted the JV routines. "It's fun going up; but, when you come down it can be dangerous if the other people don't catch you right," said Elissa Tinter who agreed with Jenny Pelehaty. Flys, including Melissa Dorman, Jenny Pelehaty, Elissa Tinter and Michelle Perdomo, went up on people's shoulders, legs and hands during stunts.

Mrs. Gerald Jones, freshman coach, and Ms. Gayle Deaton, JV coach, showed up at practice every day. "I like helping the JV squad the best because they have experience which causes them to strive to want to be on varsity," said Ms. Deaton.

Freshmen worked to perfect their cheers at the same time as JV. "Cheering is a lot of hard work, but it's exciting and it keeps us out of trouble," said Dagmarys Lebron and Leticia Woodside.

After their tiring workouts, the cheerleaders held their heads high, since they knew how hard they had worked to be the best. Melissa Dorman, 10

New members, team unity and a large group means a winning season for the cross country team. The team has its best season since the mid-1980s.

From practicing on August 31 in 89 degree weather to a meet on September 30 in 55 degree weather, the Cross Country Team had an outstanding season. "We ran in all types of weather ranging from hot and dry to cold and wet. It's all part of being on the team," said senior Dave Webb.

The team attended two invitationals. On October 3, the team traveled to the William and Mary Invitational. The boys' team placed second. At the Palotti Invitational in Maryland, the girls won first place. Seniors Caroline Henderson, Syreeta Emory and Junior Chrissy Mittendorff medaled. "Palotti was a very challenging course, but it was still a lot of fun," said junior Kristin Phillips. The boys received second place. Juniors Todd Williams, Jason Lang, sophomores Noah Hammer, Brian Hackett and freshman Kelly Hall medaled.

The girls' team received third place in Districts on October 28. Henderson placed 11th and Mittendorff placed 13th in individuals. "Districts was a great experience beause we had the chance to run togther as a real team," said junior Sarah Davis.

Districts, for the boys, was a very close race, with only 10 points separating first and fourth place. The boys placed fourth. Senior David Webb, Williams and Hammer all medaled. Senior Vicki Hughes did not run in Districts since she was still sore from running in the Marine Corps Marathon. She ran the 26 miles in four hours, 24 minutes. Karen Jupiter, 12

Two losses against the Jefferson Colonials thwart the Girls' Tennis Team's attempt at a perfect season. However, they post the best season in 15 years.

Lead by juniors Anna and Jesse Barlow, the Girls' Tennis Team dominated the courts. The 16 member team placed second in the Gunston District behind Thomas Jefferson Science and Technology. The team finished the regular season at 8-2. All wins were 7-2 except a 1-8 loss to Jefferson September 17 and a 2-7 loss to the same school on October 5. The girls' tennis team began Gunston District Tournament play on October 19 at West Potomac. "I was really proud that the team placed so well this year. It is a very enjoyable experience to play on an outstanding team with outstanding players," said junior Temperance Walker.

"The tennis season was great. We had a team with a lot of talent, a wonderful coach who led us to take second in the district and we had a lot of fun getting there. This was definitely a season to remember," said senior Wendy Weaver.

The team had the best record that they have had in 15 years. Both Barlows had excellent seasons. The two obtained the nickname "Texas Tornadoes" because of their playing abilities. Placing second in the district and having the best season in 15 years was a great accomplishment for the team and the school. Fans and players alike celebrate after the first homecoming win in six years. However, even with key wins, the team only finishes fourth in the six member Gunston District.

As the rain fell and the last whistle blew, the fans, students and players all screamed in victory. For the first time in six years the team won the homecoming game by beating the Jefferson Colonials 12-0 on October 30.

With a 246 yard carry, senior running back Clyde Gay broke the school record, received the "Toyota" Player of the Week award fom Channel 8 and gained recognition from the "Washington Post". Junior kicker Edwhar Nunez, distinquished himself with two field goals, one from the 38 yard line.

Another coup came with a 9-7 afternoon win over T.C. Williams. Pregame predictions favored the Titans by a large margin. The season ended with a 24-0 shut out of the Edison Eagles. Sophomore Chang Yi said, "The Edision team was much easier going then I expected. I thought they would try much harder then they did."

Four seniors, linebacker Daniel Beal, defensive back Phillip Williams, wide receiver Michael Jackson, punter Daniell Bull and junior kicker Edwhar Nunez, made 1st Team All-District. Bull and Nunez also made 1st Team All-Region and 1st and 2nd team, respectively, All-State.

HIKING

Learning a new sport, for the freshmen team, and perfecting an old one, for the junior varsity team, means long hours of hard work. Plagued with injuries the JV team posts no victories.

On September 9, a hot and sunny day, young men walked on to a field about 100 yards long. They knew the physical work they were about to endure would be hard in that hot weather. They knew that besides the hot weather they would have to endure yelling, sacking, tackling, throwing and running. But they did not care. They knew that football season had begun.

Since their previous schools did not have football programs, players on the Freshman Football Team had to rely on their own skill. Said freshman Michael Dubiel, "The beginning of the season was very hard because there was a lot of stuff we had to learn." By the end of the season the guys had learned enough to finish third in the district.

"Even though we did not win any games we tried our hardest to score," said said sophomore Bobby Budynkiewecz of the Junior Varsity Team. Even though their year was not triumphant, the JV team played well and lost many close games in the last minutes. Sophomore Brian Breshnahan started as quarterback and classmates Nick Palmer, Diego Boyd and Jim Sparling made many key plays.

Offensive line coach and '87 graduate, Mr. Joe Piatt, Jr. summed up the season when he said, "We had a tough season due to a tough schedule and the fact that a lot of the guys had never played before. I was really proud of the way they played their hearts out no matter what the score was."

STICKING

On September 11 the hockey season begins with a 5-0 trouncing of the Stuart Raiders. However, fame proves fleeting as varsity ends the season with only two wins.

With many returning players, the Varsity Field Hockey Team had experience. Senior co-captains, Claudine Ebeid and Mary Flaherty kept the varsity team in good spirit for their matches. The team consisted of six seniors, five juniors and four sophomores. Sophomore Huong Ly said, "I played on the junior varsity field hockey team last year. There is a big difference in the level of competition between JV and Varsity."

Sophomores Paula Kolas and Tammy Duricka worked together as co-captains of the JV team. As the rookie freshmen experienced a new sport, they made new friends and learned to how work as a team.

Freshman Penny Parsons said, "Field hockey was a real experience for me. Not only did I learn how to play a great game, I made many close friends. I was very nervous because it was my first year, but now I have realized the worst thing a person can be is discouraged."

When districts arrived, seniors Lanissa Legere and Carolann Rist received Honorable Mention All-Districts. Rist was also named Most Valuable Player within the school.

"Even though we had a losing season, I felt that we worked as a team. The team was young, but the few seniors we had, had all played for four years. It's hard losing and knowing its the last time you'll ever play, but this team was definitely one I was proud of," said senior Claudine Ebeid. Sochenda Dan, 11

PUTTING

With three wins, the young team completes a successful season. The future looks bright with 11 new team members including four freshmen.

For the first time, girls tried out and made the Golf Team. Juniors Claire Hiebert and Chelsi Hayden played with the boys. "When we played golf in PE, Mr. Taylor told me that I should try out for the team," said junior Claire Hebiert.

The team consisted of four freshmen, three sophomores and five juniors. "To me it seems like more people are trying out for the team because they realize that it isn't as boring as it looks," said sophomore John Levy .

With an average stroke of 36 per nine holes, senior team captain Hiroshi Nakatsuka lead the team. He attended regions and districts all four years and went to state his junior and senior years. He received third in the disrtict and placed in the top five in the region.

Seniors Tony Lawrence, Andy Sutton, junior Pat Hickey and freshmen Brian Beach and Pat Langley also advanced to districts. Newcomer Sutton from Georgia, had the second best record on the team.

The team practiced at the Mount Vernon Country Club. "Practicing at the country club was a lot of fun. It gave me the chance to challenge myself on a professional course," said freshman Marc Lutz.

FLEXIBLE

Determination and coordination help gymnasts succeed. These elements lead to good performances and allow Troung and Bennett to advance to Regionals.

Competing on the bars, beam, floor and vault, the gymnasts gave exciting performances. They performed jumps, flips, and balancing positions that brought "oohs" and "ahhs" from the crowd.

"We didn't have many returning members from last year, but all of the new members worked really hard," said sophomore Cathy Marlatt.

Different styles of performances showed throughout the team. "The scores and team effort have improved tremendously since last year," said sophomore Sarah Boykin.

Seniors Kerry Bennett and Linda Truong competed in all-around, which meant they had performances in all of the events whereas others only competed in one or two. After competing in Districts, Bennett advanced to Regionals on the beam while Truong competed all-around. "I was really surprised that I made regionals in the all-around category, since all of the other winners participate in club gymnastics and I don't," said Troung.

Success finds the Majors during the basketball season. Triumphs prove that determination can change stereotypes as guys place second in Gunston District.

Five, four, three, two, one. The ball went up into the air as the buzzer sounded and two points were added as freshman Diante Henson made a crucial layup to break the 71-71 tie-score against Lee.

"This is the program that is going to turn things around for Mount Vernon," said varsity coach Mr. Derek Steele. Turn around certainly became the motto for the varsity team. Hard work and perserverance paid off with a second place district seed after the Lee game on February 5.

After a double overtime victory against the Jefferson Colonials on January 22, the season took a turn for the better. With a district record of 8 and 2, the squad held onto its second place in the Gunston District after defeating the first seed Hayfield team. "It took us a while to get started, but once we did we were unstoppable," said senior Ben Harris.

The JV squad remained undefeated in all district play, an accomplishment that had not been acheived for 15 years. JV coach Mr. John Grogan said, "We have a talented team that shows great potential for the coming year." According to Coach Grogan the weakness of the team arose from the inconsistancy of the player performance, while their athletic ability proved its strength.

Both JV and varsity had successful seasons and the coaches agreed that the coming year looked just as promising. Mandy Sahay, 12

JUMPING

Teamwork, discipline and improvement allow girls' JV and Varsity basketball teams to excel. New players help to lead JV team while Varsity relies on returning members.

"I think the Girls' Basketball Team has improved tremendously since last year. Coach Brent really runs us hard and makes us do what we need to as a team. We may not win, but at least we work hard and try to correct our mistakes," said junior Jenny Shiplett.

Even though the JV team usually consists of sophomores and juniors, four freshmen made the team. Freshman Lisa Colley said, "Playing with people older than me has helped me improve. Our team is working hard and it's starting to show."

Although the JV team started the season on a low note with a loss to W.T. Woodson, it recovered with a win on December 15 against Stuart. After a long and strenuous season, the JV team ended with a victory against arch-rival West Potomac.

Sophomore Sediah Jaleiba said, "The Girls' JV Basketball Team had a great season. Having a coach like Jack Ridley gave us the opportunity to play hard. With the team effort and his coaching talent, we placed second in the district."

Like the JV team, varsity started the season on the wrong foot, but bounced back with a win against Edison. During the Annandale Christmas Tournament on December 28-30, the girls placed sixth out of 18 teams. "I was happy that we did so well. The practices and determination finally paid off," said junior Angela Rathbone. Georgina Rivera, 11

DEFENSE

Freshmen have to learn a new game and to adjust to entire new team members. The best of the freshmen moved onto the JV and Varsity teams.

"Suicide drills were the worst," said Christy Carlson with an enthusiastic look on her face, "but it was all worth it in the end. We played hard and had a good time, even when we lost." Basketball players sacrificed Friday nights and Saturday afternoons to make sure the team succeeded.

The boys had it equally hard, with parctices every day after school and on weekends."I love playing basketball and I had a good time being on a team with such good sports," said Janette Cline.

Against arch-rival West Potomac, the boys took some hard hits, but triumped in both matches. The girls, however, suffered defeat in both games.

Janette Cline, Beth Buckley, Nicole Brown and Liz Gerloff provided key plays for the girls. For the boys, Leonard Singletary served as a strong rebounder with 25 rebounds and 23 points in one game. John Hughes, Pat Langley and Raphael "The Rock" Pope became strong shooters.

Coach Gary Larson viewed the Lake Braddock game as the best of the season. "Lake Braddock thought they were the best because they were undefeated, but our boys came and won. Their strengths were their hustling, defense and rebounds," said Mr. Larson.

Expressing the feelings of many of her teammates, Malika Powell said, "I had a good time playing this year and we had a good season." Christina Short, 9

AQUATIC

New coach, Mr. Cary Tantalinger, leads the swim and dive team to a victorious season. Pride, unity and spirit shine through.

On a cold afternoon, November 10th, practice began. With 48 members on the team, 38 swimmers and ten divers, the team included of fifteen freshman. Nineteen members were lost to graduation.

"We have hardworking freshman such as Kelly Osborne and Katie Kelly. They're enthusastic and willing to learn. Its one of the best teams I've ever worked with," said Coach Tantlinger.

Mr. Tantlinger, who coached for the Arlington Aquatic Marine Club, replaced former coach Jeff Bush. "Over my past four years on the swim team, I have never had a coach that pushes each individual to his extreme as Cary does. He strives for team unity," said senior Ticia Harbour.

Seniors Eric Young and Steve Smith served as team captains for the guys' team and seniors Allison Pearsall and Megan Thomas headed the girls' team. "The guys' team is very strong and the girls' as well. We are a small young team, but we all give our best. The most important thing is we have fun," said Thomas.

With bare legs and towels wrapped around them, swim team members strolled down the hallways. To show team spirit, members dressed up as red necks, flashers and wore strange apparel to schol on meet days.

Cheers, made up by members of the team, encouraged swimmers at meets. Senior Erick Messing said, "Sauerkraut, sauerkraut, our favorite dish. When you see us swim, you'll think we're fish," a cheer created by senior Steve Smith.

"I'm glad I joined the swim team. Everyone is really friendly; we're like one big happy family," said freshman Kelly Osborne. Barbara O'Leary, 11

STRUGGLE

With experienced grapplers leading the way, the wrestling team once again clinches the Gunston District title. Senior Mike Stabile takes fifth at States.

Burning and sweating, the wrestlers cheered each other on to assure success. "Wrestling is the ultimate challenge; it puts two men of equal size against one another," said junior Byron Galentine.

On February 12 and 13 the wrestlers hosted the District Championships. The team defeated Jefferson, Lee, Hayfield and Edision. For the second straight year, they won the Gunston District Championship. Senior Mike Stabile went undefeated.

On December 11 and 12, the wrestling team came in fifth place in the Northern Regional Classic. Stabile (145 lbs) came in first place in his weight class. Being a state qualifier in '92 helped Stabile work harder for his goal. Stabile became Regional Champion and placed fifth at States.

Senior Jason Rakes (heavyweight) and Galentine (189) both placed sixth in their weight classes. Junior Scott Rankin (152) placed seventh.

Sophomore Chang Yi, a JV heavyweight wrestler, went undeafeated and became the district champ in his weight class. Said Yi, "It's a lot of work but I enjoy the sport. Some people think all you do is throw people around, but it's more then that. You have to train hard and practice hard."

"Wrestling is a very emotional sport. When you lose, you have no one to blame but yourself," said junior Owen Riley. Janice Barton, 10

MOVING

Running, jumping, and throwing challenge every member of the winter track team. Cold weather often made the competitors ill, yet track members dealt with these problems.

Twenty more feet to go. Ten. Five, two, one. Over the line. Good! For the Winter Track Team, the season was as long and cold as ever. Even though most meets were indoors, the team practiced outside.

"It was tough," said freshman Khoi Do, "but fun."

Coaches Mr. Charles Brown and Mr. Steve Kent practiced with the team. Senior Angelo Acerra said, "The coaches really helped keep the team together. Whenever somebody forget something, one of the coaches would remember."

As a fundraiser, members ran laps for pledges. "I was so tired when I finished that I fell down and didn't get up," said junior Tranae Jones who completed 23 laps. "But it was good to know that the money I raised helped the team."

After practicing every day in the wintery weather, several members became sick. "Whenever people showed up for practice, they would always ask 'Where's the team?'" said Keala Murdock.

Key players on the boys' team included jumpers Dawane Wallace and Ed Ebeid, hurdler Gene Clayborn, Acerra and Bobby Shelton in shotput, and runners Jason Lang and David Webb. Female standouts included runners Syreeta Emory, Murdock and Aimee Convery, hurdler Jill Metcalf, Melanie Dun Moodie in shotput, and Ja Nelle and Tranae Jones in triple jump. Jen Saks, 9

MOTION

After an award winning season, the Varsity Soccer Team tries to live up to its record. To raise needed money, the guys host a girls' indoor tournament in December.

"We must make up for the loss of senior players by working harder and being more organized," said senior Luis Ferriera. After winning Districts for the first time in the Major's history, the Boys' Varsity Soccer team prepared to keep up with the previous success. At the end of the '92 season, JV players, junior Jeremy Fletcher and Edwhar Nunez and sophomore Neri Dominguez advanced to varsity and played in Districts. "Varsity is more work and not as fun, but the competition is much better," said junior Jeremy Fletcher.

On December 12 and 13, the JV and varsity teams held a girls' indoor tournament for fundraising purposes. They raised over $1000 and used it for warmups and uniforms. "The indoor game was a great way to earn money for the team," said senior Adeel Ahmed.

Practices took place on the field at Walt Whitman Intermediate, where the varsity coach Mr. Jim Apt taught PE. The team's drills and warmups consisted of kicking, passing, dribbling techniques and running. Sophomore Tom Bergeron said, "Soccer practice was strenuous on the hot days, so we got a thorough workout."

The Blizzard of '93 cancelled the opening March 17 scrimmage. After more inclement weather cancelled the first three games, JV Coach Zeff Yusof had only this to say, "Now soccer is in the hands of the Lord."

"With the incoming of many freshman players, the future of the Boy's Varsity team looks promising," said sophomore Edmond Ebeid. Sochenda Dan, 11

SCORING

A group of experiened players lead the varsity team to its victories. The junior varsity team had to learn how to work together, since it consisted of ten new freshmen.

A combination of team work and a positive attitude led the Girls' Soccer Team to a successful year. "This year we expected to turn our team around. We received a positive attitude from all the players," said Coach T.J White.

Tryouts this year proved to be more difficult. Coach White expected the girls to come out with skills, dicipline, and enthusiasm. Tryouts lasted for a week and tested the girls' endurance.

Practice proved just as difficult. Twelve to twenty minutes worth of non-stop running, followed a two hour practice, pushed the girls to do their best. "The best part about our team is that we work hard and all support each other. The worst part is the running," said freshman Liz Gerloff.

Several returning players made the varsity team, including fourth year players Allison Pearsall and Kara Bassily. "Missing the season last year has made me hungry. As seniors we are looking to go out with a winning season," said Claudine Ebied.

"The JV captains did great this year. They've done a terrific job of keeping the teams spirits up when we lost a game," said freshman Jen Lorentzen.

"What is great about the team is that everyone tries her hardest, and no one has a bad attitude. We are friends off the field and that improves our game," said freshman Jennifer Riley. Amanda Maier, 12

As winter fades into spring, many students come to the track to join the Spring Track Team and run. Varied events allow students to make choices while keeping the team on its toes.

At Spring Track's first pre-season meeting, the three coaches Charlie Brown, Steve Kent and Michael Sullivan stood at the front of the room. "I expected many people to come," started off Coach Sullivan, "but I didn't expect there to be standing room only. Please come in and sit where ever you can." The prospective team members came in and gathered around the coaches.

Small clumps of snow still lay on the ground during the team's first practice held on March 1. When junior Jennifer Mullins jogged by she said, "I didn't feel like I was starting a spring sport, because I had to watch out for snow and ice."

"I had a good time being on the spring track team," said freshman Kaela Murdock. "Spring is the best season to run because it's warm and the distances aren't incredibly long. It seemed like everybody wanted to get outside and do something at the start of the season, so the team was really big."

Coach Brown took charge of girls' and boys' long and middle distance runners, while Coach Sullivan kept an eye on girls' and boys' sprinter, relay runners and jumpers. Coach Kent organized the hurdlers and throwers.

"With all the people on the team, I thought that we had a really good chance at Districts," said Coach Kent.

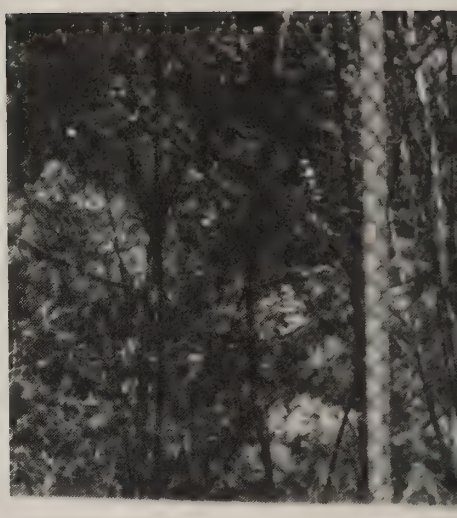
Away from the pack, senior Nancy Estrada keeps herself running at a steady pace. In longer distance competitions or while practicing, pacing made a difference between low or high scores.

Seconds into their sprint, senior Wesley Watts and sophomore Dawane Wallace vie for the lead against Lee opponents Brian Cotter and John Howell. When sprinting, students found every second important.

DRIVING



Since the team size gets cut, players learn to work differently. With only one of the top players returning, the team tries to fill in the gaps needed for a successful season.

"It was a rebuilding year for the team and there are a lot of talented players. There were lots of people at our meetings too, so that means that we have a lot of interested players," said Coach Bob Sciabica.

Mini-tournaments decided whether a student trying out made it on the team. In these tournements the students played each other with the winner moving up the ladder and the loser moving down. The top fourteen students made the team, but only seven played on varsity.

Coach Sciabica cut the team from seventeen players to fourteen players. The team had a difficult time playing singles beacause there was not enough room on the court during practice for the entire team to play. Also, valuable players had to sit out during matches.

Junior Jason Kennedy said, "Less people on the team will make us a better team; we will have more opportunity to play and the coach will be able to spend more time with each of us."

Graduation claimed four out of five of the'92 team's best players. Senior Rick Garber remained. The best match played in '92, according to Coach Sciabica, involved Garber and graduate Peter Price.

At the two weekly matches, the team played in six singles matches and three doubles. Players not playing in these matches played in exhibition matches which did not count as a win or a loss for the team.

"We have a lot of new players this year, but we are still a great team," said junior Dennis Morris. Mike Kelly, 12; Karen Jupiter, 12

STRIKE

With strong varsity players leading the way, baseball wins the first round of regionals. JV players work to develop their skills so they can move to varsity in the next season.

"Strike three! He's out!" yelled the umpire as senior Chris Ray finished up his second no hitter. Ray pitched almost perfect games against both West Potomac and Washington and Lee in 1992.

The Varsity Baseball Team, composed of mostly juniors last season, didn't let their youth get in the way. All of the players had played JV or varsity baseball , and their experience gave them an extra edge. Pitcher and first baseman, senior William Malerich received recognition, including a baseball scholarship to William and Mary.

A win at the regional game at Washington and Lee served as the highlight of the '92 season. Senior catcher Mike Gallahan said, "When you lose you say little, when you win you say even less."

Sophomore Jim Titus moved up to varsity after graduate Shawn Hall quit. As a first time high school player, Titus proved equal to the task.

Almost twice as many students tried out for the JV team as could be on it. Coach Tim Sturgeon said, "This year's JV will do well if they can focus on improving their skills and concentration."

The indoor batting cage gave the teams the opportunity to practice during cold or rainy weather. Coach Randy Slack said, "With a high number of returning players, this season can only be better than last year's." Mandy Sahay, 12

POWER

Varsity softball works to improve skills and to fill the gaps left behind by graduating seniors. New arrivals, including numerous freshmen, fill the JV roster.

"We have a lot of potential, but we have a lot of holes to fill from last year," said varsity coach Elliot Tepper. The Varsity Softball Team had only four returning starters: seniors Denise Bridgeman, Wendy Weaver, Jessica Barton and Caroline Henderson.

Tryouts began on March 1 for everyone; even players on the previous year's team had to try out, except for Barton, last year's team captain. At try outs students participated in hitting, fielding and running. Attitude, aggresiveness, enthusiasm and grades also played an important role in the coaches' decisions.

For the first year, the team utilized an indoor batting facility to help players improve their hitting skills. To pay for the new pitching machine and a trip to Camp Highroad, the teams sold candy.

Several players played softball outside of school. Junior Melody Westmeyer, sophomore Terry Kurfurst, Henderson, Barton, Bridgeman, Weaver and Henderson participated in summer ball. "I first became interested in softaball when I played little league in second grade. I have been playing ever since," said sophomore Heather Stone.

"This is my fourth year involved in softball at Mt. Vernon. It has definitely been the highlight of my high school career. I have gained self disipline and knowledge through softball," said Weaver. Karen Jupiter, 12

RELEASE

Returning players continue tradition, while beginners learn the ropes. Snow and heavy rains cancel the first scrimmage and leave the field too soggy to begin the season on time.

"I'm looking forward to this being our most successful year yet. Many of our players have at least four years of experience and many have been playing together a few years now. I'm confident this season holds exciting things as we work to establish an exciting tradition," said varsity coach Mr. Andrew Gerard.

Lacrosse started the season off the first of March with hopeful expectations. "Considering we've got a lot of good players on varsity, I think we're going to have a good season," said senior Danny Hoben.

Snow and rain cancelled a scrimmage and the first game, giving players more time to prepare for competition. Players put long hard hours into practice, not to mention lots of suicide runs. "The coaches run us really hard, but it pays off in the end," said junior John Ko.

"Its important for us to know where our help is at all times. If we don't communicate, we won't get anywhere," said sophomore Eli Frazelle. During games and practices players often shouted to teammates, "Here's your help!"

"Lacrosse is a great sport and it works on your coordination," said junior Jonathan Gibb. Georgina Rivera, 11; Barbara O'Leary, 11

Concern for others proved important to students. During the winter season DECA, the National Honor Society and the Student Government Association bonded together to hold a canned food drive to benefit the homeless. The subschools collected the donations and the one with the most food, the sophomore class, received a prize. Students Against Drunk Driving painted posters and signs warning students against driving while intoxicated. DECA packed clothes to send to hurricane Andrew's victims in Florida. The Major Readers, a new club, formed. Students who enjoyed reading met during their lunch time to discuss books that they had enjoyed. In order to raise money, the Art Honor Society sold posters of famous paintings during lunch. The Spanish Club and Honor Society together sold rings, bracelets and necklaces from Latin American countries including Peru and Columbia. After the school day finished, students enjoyed knowing that they could attend activities that were created soley for their enjoyment. Each student could find his own personal niche in a club suiting his basic style.

JOURNEY

Field trips broaden students' horizons and awareness while providing them with a fun hiatus from work.

Getting out in the world gave students a chance to have fun and connect what they learned with what they wanted to know. "Field trips are great and let you get out of class," said sophomore Timothy Andrews.

Unbeaten Path went to the Smithsonian, Hologram Museum, the National Zoo and the Baltimore Aquarium. Spanish Club and Honor Society visited an exhibit on Mayans at the National Geographic Museum on January 9. They viewed Mayan sculptures, tools and art.

German Club attended Busch Gardens in the fall to learn more about European life and to have fun. In the spring, the club attended the German Convention.

Fellowship of Christian Athletes attended three retreats: a fall retreat, the state fall retreat and the spring retreat. Youth-to-Youth attended the Rhode Island Youth Conferance, Youth Council and a retreat at Roanoke College.

DECA members served others by taking a field trip to a warehouse where they cut tags off of clothes donated by Eddie Bauer. Victims of Hurricane Andrew in Florida received the clothes. Said junior Jon Kimball, "I got a warm feeling in my heart and a burning ache in my shoulders."

PREPARE

Class related clubs help students learn real life job skills as they prepare to take their places in society.

Students often asked, "What practical use could this class possibly have?" Although abstract concepts provided the bulk of most classes, other classes automatically enrolled students in clubs, such as Distributive Education Clubs of America, Vocational Industrial Clubs of America, Home Economics Related Occupations and Future Business Leaders of America, that provided job training.

DECA students went to Districts at Fair Oaks Mall. They competed in various activities such as selling and distribution of products. Seniors Jose Cartegena and Tony Henderson placed for Selling and junior Derek Besmer placed for Food Services. "Getting a chance to compete helps you understand the career more," said sophomore Rob Barrie.

VICA members in Cosmetology practiced their trade when adults and students came to them for haircuts and manicures. On February 17 members showed off their skills by producing a hair fashion show during both lunches.

"It's weird doing people's hair in school. It's kind of a job, but I enjoy it," said junior Tenina Davis.

HERO students in Peer Counseling gained self esteem by helping other students cope with their problems. Doing this also gave them a chance to explore various types of counseling jobs.

HERO members also prepared cookies and other treats for various faculty functions which allowed them to see how the food service industry worked.

FBLA produced a mock trial which showed how students would have to perform if they wanted to be a lawyer, judge, legal assistant or jury member. The trial proved that the real world wasn't always what it seemed.

Senior Angel Sepulveda summed up the meaning of clubs when he said, "DECA has a lot of benefits and so do all of the other clubs. I think its great that our school tries to get us involved in activities, and they are fun." Jennifer Mullins, 11

Comedy highlighted the evening as the guys strutted their stuff to see who would be named Mr. MV. Seniors dominated with James Harris winning, Luis Ferreira becoming the runner up and Bobby Shelton placing third.

The SGA sponsored Dating Game, held on February 11, displayed a variety of talents and personalities. Students gathered to watch their friends be paired up with others. "It's funny watching your friends make fools of themselves in a harmless way," said junior Brian Reed.

On February 4, 5 and 6, the Thespians produced "Auntie Mame." Try-outs and rehersals began in October. "All of us spent a lot of time doing various things. In the end the time spent paid off," said senior Phil Lunn.

Fashion Merchandising classes and DECA presented "A Whole New World," the big fashion show. Over ninety girls and guys produced the March 11 spectacular.

At the close the year during Mayfest, all the clubs provided a variety of entertainment. "It's great that we can have things like Mayfest and Mr. MV. It kind of gives us a chance to unwind while we're still on school premises," said freshman Tobi Denick. Jennifer Mullins, 11

ICC met on the second Tuesday of each month to discuss the club fundraisers and activities. "It was a lot of fun being a part of the ICC; it gave me a chance to interact with the other clubs and see what they were doing," said senior Amanda Maier.

"Give us a problem and we will fix it," said senior Aisha Jewell. SAC consisted of students from Mt. Vernon, Edison, West Potomac, Hayfield, Lee and Thomas Jefferson and Mr. G.J. Tarazi, Area I secondary coordinator. They met once a month at the Area I office and discussed current problems such as condom distribution, racism and whether or not to continue having class rank.

SGA provided activities, such as Dating Game and Mayfest, that allowed students to get together. "The Dating Game was a great experience. It was very interesting to watch too. It's a wonderful way to keep our pyramid of schools together and to have all the students involved," said senior Lester Wong. Kristina Mares, 12

CARRY

Although students and teachers only see the final glamourous product, behind the scenes workers spend hours doing the tedious work required for production of a quality creation.

Behind every final project, whether a play, the yearbook or an edition of "Major News," numerous students labored anonomously to meet deadlines.

Yearbook members worked after school and on holidays. "The yearbook staff spent long hours stuggling to meet deadlines so the yearbook would be distributed on time. If deadlines were missed then the whole school would be let down because of the staff's carelessness," said editor-in-chief, senior Karen Jupiter.

The German Club students made arrangements so that foreign exchange students could come and visit their American friends for three weeks. "I can't wait till Anja comes to visit. We have so many things planned to do when she arrives," said senior Nancy Propst. On March 28, twenty students arrived from Germany for a three week visit. On March 29 club members welcomed them with a reception.

"The Em Vee Hi" staffers faced monthly deadlines as they provided the school with news. At the end of each month, reporters and editors alike monopolized the computers and the laser printer in the Cook computer lab, while photographers printed pictures in the darkroom. "Being the editor of the newspaper was a tough job. It took a lot of hard work and dedication," said senior Joy Park.

Planning a whole news show required writers, cameramen and film editors to support those actually on camera. "Putting together Major News took lots of planning and getting along with others. Without it there is no news," said senior Angel Sepulveda.

In February, the "Major News" staff put together an Earth Science game show. "I think that 'Major News' is a very interesting thing to do for the Earth Science classes. The questions were good and the answers were very informative," said freshman Marc Lutz.

Meeting deadlines and making big plans involving students proved difficult, but the unseen workers made it all happen. Amanda Maier, 12

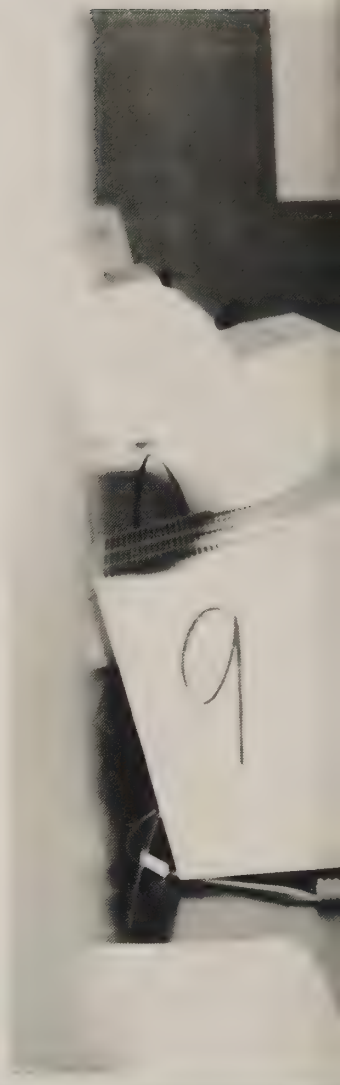
Honor societies let students share their common interests and give them a chance to excel.



"I feel proud being a part of an honor society. I am honored to be among the top minds in Mount Vernon," said sophomore Jamie White. Regarded with esteem, honor societies only let top students in the field belong.

National Honor Society requires a 3.25 GPA; however, Fairfax county students must maintain a 3.5 GPA to belong. Students who excelled while participating on the newspaper, yearbook or literary magazine belonged to Quill and Scroll.

Language honor society members had to be in the third year of the language and maintain a 3.0 GPA. They also tutored other students. On April 23, 19 Latin Honor Society members attended the Latin Convention and competed in written tests and cultural contests.

Along with maintaining a 3.5 GPA, Math Honor Society members had to tutor others or help out a math teacher for ten hours a semester. "Since I am in BC Calculus, I have the ability to tutor people in other math classes," said senior Mike Stabile.

Honor societies needed to raise money to pay for graduation tassles. "To gather funds for Art Honor Society, we held a poster sale," said senior Margaret Johnson.

"Business Honor Society is small, but we all share the common interest of going into a business career," said senior Donna Oakes. Karen Jupiter, 12

REACHING

Activities gather students together to extend a hand for worthy causes and to raise awareness in and out of school.

As they reached out to the community, clubs such as the Environmental Concerns Society and Students Against Drunk Driving raised awareness. Both clubs created posters that made people aware of the social issues that create problems. "The Earth is our mother. Good children always take care of their mother. That's all we do in ECS; just protect our mother," said Jon Kimball.

The Vegetarian Club in its second year took action by posting leaflets saying "Boycott Loreal" around Riverside neighborhood and school. Freshman Jennifer Saks said, "I think veggie club is good because it lets vegetarians get together and talk about things. We try to plan revenge against fat carnivores who eat live pet goldfish on stages."

Besides raising the awareness on social issues, clubs such as DECA, Key Club, National Honor Society and Unbeaten Path dedicated their time with community service. Unbeaten Path collected toys for Salvation Army at Christmas and they also got involved in Rainforest Conservation Awareness. National Honor Society and SGA held a food drive that also involved competition between the classes to see who could donate the most.

"Being involved in a club allows students to be a part of school instead of just being an outsider," said Mr. Bob Ingalls.

WINNERS

Competition. Just mention the word and sports instantly come to mind; however, students found other ways to compete. Senior Math Team students met once a month and tested their knowledge by doing as many problems out of five as possible. "The problems really challenge what you know. I can usually answer one or two problems correctly," said senior Dave Libby.

At Congress Two and Three, senior Debate Team captain Karen Jupiter's peers voted her Most Outstanding Senator. Jupiter, senior Vicki Hughes and juniors Sean Jensen and Greg Carmichael qualified for Metro finals on March 19 and 20 at Edison High School. Jupiter and Hughes also qualified for Nationals. Sponsor Mr. Jim Frishman said, "I think that debate and forensics is a unique opportunity for students to practice skills which will be useful later in life."

On January 27, DECA members went to Fair Oaks Mall to compete in Districts. Winners included sophomores William Marshall, Rob Barrie, Dawane Wallace, Mandy Redfern, juniors Jon Kimball, Demetrius Wheeler, seniors Todd Michener, Shawn Behrens, Denise Dejesus, Amanda Maier, Nina Hooks, Jose Cartagena and Tony Henderson. Kimball said, "I didn't really think I'd win, so I was real surprised when I did."

Competition allowed students to excel and build self-confidence. Georgina Rivera, 11

Awards in sports, academics, drama and debate all provide an encouraging pat on the back for students who have worked hard to achieve skills.

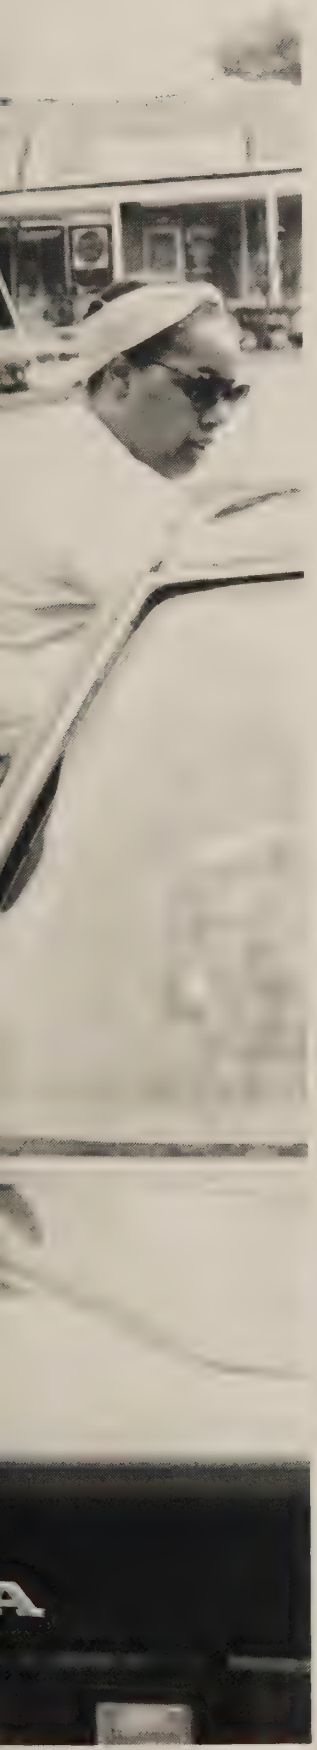
At the poster sale held by the Art Honor Society, junior Samantha Kim and sophomore Francine DeJesus add up the sales for that day. Poster sales provided a creative way to raise money.

SPLISH SPLASH

As she helps out her class, senior Eden Woldegebriel scrubs down a customer's car. Carwashs proved to be a popular activity for students to have fun and raise money at the same time.

EARNING

Karen Jupiter



When clubs need funds to support their activities, students prove willing to raise all the money necessary.

"With times as tough as they are, the clubs need to take matters into their own hands to raise the necesary funds," said senior Angelo Acerra.

As a way to make money, some clubs sold food. The International Club sold eggrolls, while the FBLA sold candy. "Having candy sold in school in school is a convenient way for me to buy it, since I don't have to go all the way to 7-11," said junior Alan Johnson. Each member of the National Honor Soceity had to sell at least ten boxes of Krispy Kreme doughnuts.

Yearbook raised funds by holding the Mr. Mount Vernon contest. Yearbook collected money during lunch from students who wished to support their favorite candidate for the title. Then when the contest was held, on January 28, they collected the money from the tickets sold.

The SGA held the Dating Game on February 12. Students from Mt. Vernon participated as well as students from other schools such as West Potomac and Hayfield.

Chorus and band raised money to pay for their trips by holding, respectively, a dance-a-thon and a rock-a-thon in February. Friends and family pledged money for the hours they danced or rocked.

"Don't let anyone take the fun out of fundraising. It can be a great way to enjoy yourself as well as make money," said sophomore Jamie White. Karen Jupiter, 12

SCOOP IT OUT

FIESTA

Club members have fun socializing, listening to various types of music and sampling different types of food.

"I think it's important for clubs to have parties because it helps keep the members active and interested," said sophomore Noah Kaufman. Club parties helped make clubs more enjoyable and they provided a way for members to meet and socialize.

At language club parties, students dined on foreign foods and listened to music from different countries. The Latin Club held its annual dinner party at Primo's Italian Restaurant. At school they participated in a Saturnalia Pizza Party and an lantaculum, a Roman breakfast.

The Spanish Club members sampled food from various Spanish speaking countries and danced to Spanish music at their Christmas party. In April, the International Club hosted a party for teachers which featured a fashion show, folk music and ethnic foods.

Since DECA and FBLA students joined through marketing and business classes, members attended these parties during class. Dominoes and Subway donated pizza and subs as a business promotion. "DECA parties are always fun because you get to talk with everyone and the food is free," said sophomore Chris Wise.

Youth to Youth, a new club formed by senior Angel Harris-Lewis, held parties which promoted a drug and alcohol-free environment. Said Harris-Lewis, "A party without drugs and alcohol is more fun than a party with drugs and alcohol."

SCIENCE SNACK

VOCALIZE

While entertaining others during performances, choir members express their emotions and learn to face a crowd with aplomb.

"Singing is a way for me to relax and to express my feelings. Music is an important part of my life," said junior Sarah Pollack. Under the direction of Mrs. Ruth McConnell, the Madrigals, Concert Choir, MV Chorale and Chamber Singers entertained faculty, parents and students by performing fall, winter and spring concerts.

The Madrigals also appeared at the beginning of pep rallies, football games and basketball games singing the National Anthem. Also, before the winter break, they strolled through the halls caroling. Senior Carl Chambers said, "The key aspect of chorus was commitment to each other to do the best we could. Performing difficult selections of music challenged our personal musicality and strengthened the department as a whole.

On October 3, 1992, seniors Carl Chambers, Laura Stiles and Sheryl Wood traveled to Longwood College to audition for the prestigious Music Educators Honors Choir. All succeeded and they performed on November 19-21 with the choir.

Along with the orchestra, the Festival Chorus which included the whole choral department, went to New York for a festival on April 22-25. They performed a gospel/chorale called "Rockamahsoul" and Handel's "Messiah" as competition pieces.

"As wonderful as it was in the past years, I think the talent is more evident. The whole department has the most natural singing ability and it enables the group to be strong and balanced," said Mrs. McConnell. Sochenda Dan, 11

SWING

Students interested in different types of music had various music groups from which to choose. Members of the marching band divided up into the Concert and Symphonic bands.

On January 7th the Symphonic Band performed "The Star-Spangled Banner" and other patriotic pieces for the Change of Command ceremonies at Ft. Belvoir. During April the bands traveled to Myrtle Beach, S.C. for competition. "Being surrounded by music is excellent, and band is a good way to fulfill that feeling. It's a different way to express your feeings," said senior Laura Stiles.

Band members practiced for hours. "I enjoy being in the Symphonic Band. The people, music and places are all fun, but it's still a lot of hard work and I like that," said junior Teon Taylor.

"With the new director, Mr. Elgin, Jazz Ensemble has taken a trip where no jazz band has gone before," said sophomore Mike Jones. Jazz Ensemble entertained at basketball games and wrestling matches.

Junior Dennis Morris said, "I think of Jazz Band as a way of kind of fooling around with my instrument. I also like getting into the basketball games free."

Orchestra gave students a chance to perform classical music. On November 7th Junior District X Orchestra played at Sandburg Intermediate. Members who made the group included freshmen Mike Gilchrist, Amy Park and Megan Van Tassel. The group performed in the Fall Pyramid Concert along with Edison, Lee and Stuart. On December 15th the orchestra and bands played a joint winter concert.

Whether in band or in orchestra, students experimented with a diverse range of music. Georgina Rivera, 11

Both the sedate and the syncopated allow ensemble members to showcase their talents in performances and competitions.

BLAST

As the Marching Majors strive for the best, they produce brilliant sounds and memorable experiences.

On a hot August 17, in 89 degree weather, sweat rolled off their foreheads. Muscles ached from push-ups and jumping jacks. Intensity crackled in the air. Band camp had begun.

"Every day was long, hot and hard, but the results were worth it," said junior Michelle Willis. Band camp provided just the beginning.

School started and so did hours of rehearsal, lots of physical activities, basic block marching drills and weekly sectional practices. "Marching band is a lot harder than I expected," said freshman Andrea Sanders.

Participants put time and effort into the season. Students practiced every Monday, Tuesday and Thursday, with sectionals on Wednesdays. Football games on Fridays and competitions on Saturdays left everyone with little spare time. "Marching band is time consuming. Sometimes it's hard to fit my busy schedule around it," said junior Dennis Morris.

With the departure of band director Mr. Stan Schoonover and graduate drum major Derek Broka came changes. In their places came band director Mr. Jack Elgin and junior drum major Robert Pezold. "I realize it was difficult taking over such a hard job and working with a band that had our high caliber of music playing and marching, but all things considered I wouldn't pick anyone else. I think the kids really liked him a lot. I'm going to miss Mr. Elgin next year," said senior assistant drum major Angel Harris-Lewis.

On Christmas Eve, Elgin received a phone call inviting the marching band to perform at the Presidential Inaugural Gala along with W.T. Woodson and Garfield. But with less than two weeks notice, Elgin received another phone call. "They pulled the plug on us," said Elgin to a disappointed band the next morning. Even though they ended up not performing, being invited still provided an honor.

Even though the year began slowly, the Marching Majors managed to make the season a winning one. Barbara O'Leary, 11

Students found it tough to sell ads. Sports teams, newspaper, drama and yearbook received part of their funds through business advertisements. "You have to know who to ask when selling ads. Only certain businesses will buy them from the school," said junior David Neidlinger.

Old Mount Vernon Citgo provided a convenient place for students to obtain gas and to buy snacks before and after school. Citgo, located on Old Mt. Vernon Road, took less than five minutes to get to from school. Woodlawn Auto Center Inc. also had a close location.

Mrs. Roberta Lerg who ran the company Tax Time taught her government students how to do their taxes. The students learned to use the 1040EZ and 1040A forms. When the unit was completed, the students took a test on it.

For special occasions such as Prom, Homecoming and Alpha, students could go to Vincent of Pear Tree Village to take care of their beauty needs. Vincent provided hairstyling, make-up application and manicures.

At his mother's store, Mount Vernon Frame Shoppe, senior Joe Schwaninger hangs up a painting. During his free time, Schwaninger went to the store to help out.

Making financial decisions allowed students to learn how to spend their money wisely during a recession.

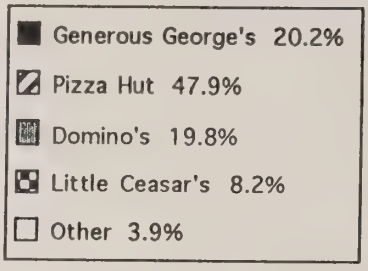
Who makes the best pizza?



Students preferred restaurants which delivered pizza to their homes. Pizza Hut had the reputation for the speediest delivery. Under "other" one student wrote, "My mom makes the best pizza!" Generous George's narrowly beat out Domino's for second place. Domino's had been around longer, but George's served larger portions. George's restaurants were decorated in abstract ways. One looked like a child's playroom, another a 50's cafe. Pizza proved a fast and tasty meal.

The Basic Facts

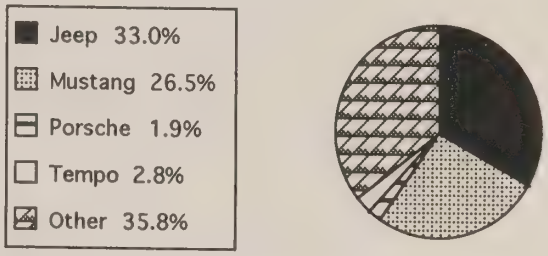
Which is the best car?



Students' favorite cars were not necesarily the most expensive ones. Jeeps overwhelmingly came in first place among upperclassmen, while Mustangs were the first choice for the underclassmen. Mustangs had the classic look to them, while Posches looked sleek and modern. Practical cars, such as a Ford Tempo, did not rank highly among students.

The Basic Facts

240 students participated in "The Basic Facts" survey. 60 of Mrs. Emily Pérez-Reyes' freshmen, 58 of Mr. Randy Slack's and Brian Taylor's sophomores, 58 of Mr. Jim Sparling's juniors and 64 of Mrs. Cathy Ruffing's seniors responded to the survey. The students circled their favorite answer from those given or wrote in their own choices under the space marked "Other." The survey tried to represent the broad range of people in the student body.

Biggest Ego

With their noses in the air, Lea Potts and Donnie Piatt stand back-to-back and say, "Don't hate us because we're beautiful." Potts had a big head about her scientific acomplishments, while Piatt's ego came from his athletic ability.

Class Clown

Karen Jupiter

Outside on the monkey bars, Carolann Rist and James Harris play around. Harris was known for wearing strange outfits to school, such as 7-11 shirts or corduroy leisure suits, while Rist often made jokes during her classes to keep things light.

By stressing the basics, students and faculty excelled. As the Varsity Boys' Basketball Team placed second in the district, Coach Derek Steele won the Gunston District Coach of the Year Award. English teacher Mr. Bob Ingalls advanced to the finals for Fairfax County Teacher of the Year. The band received the title of Virginia All-State band, the highest honor for a Virginia high school band. On March 8, the school celebrated Dr. Calanthia Tucker Day. To show support for her personal approach, banners proclaimed that "Dr. Tucker keeps the pal in principal." The music department serenaded her and senior Nhi Huynh painted Dr. Tucker's portrait. March lived up to its "lion" reputation. On March 4, four inches of rain poured down, trees toppled and the wind gusted to 35 miles per hour, knocking out power for one minute. Rumors of an early closing spread since the water treatment plant also suffered from the power outage. However, the flood only canceled afterschool activities. During the presidential campaign, both Ross Perot and Bill Clinton called for a return to simpler times and ideals. Commercials for large stores like KMart and Giant stressed environmental concerns and a return to basics. Although individualists existed, fashions, jewelry and hairstyles became more simplified. Hard times called for cut backs and a return BACK to the BASICS.

Back to the Basics

In English class, sophomore Chantel Cook looks at a comic book with her 3-D glasses. In addition to 3-D glasses from the fifties, flower power from the sixties and bell bottoms from the seventies came back in style.

COLOPHON

The 800 copies of the 1993 "Surveyor" were printed by Herff Jones Yearbooks in Gettysburg, PA using the off set lithography printing method. The 288 pages of the book are printed on 80# bordeaux enamel stock and have been printed by signature smythe sewn. The signatures have been rounded and backed for support and readability.

Editor-in-Chief Karen Jupiter designed the four color lithograph cover with polymer lamination. A special vellum material has been utilized to achieve the quarter-bound effect. The cover is a photograph of the marble floor of Union Station in Washington, DC. The base material is white litho and the cover has been turned on 160 point binders board. Our endsheets were also school designed and are printed on 100# white vibracolor stock. The applied color is black.

All body copy appears as 10 point Avant Garde Book, with captions in 8 point Avant Garde Demi. Headline styles included Times Roman in Student Life, Korinna in Academics, Souvenir Light in People, Univers Bold Condensed in Sports and Busorma Bold in Actvities.

A grid design has been used in the Activities and Sports sections.

The 1991 and 1992 "Surveyor" received a Medalist rating from the Columbia Scholastic Press Association.

The staff would like to thank Tom Tanton, our Herff Jones Representative, along with Barb Merson our Customer Service Representative. They would also like to thank Bonnie MacIntyre, Sheri Busolits and the rest of the staff at Segall-Majestic.

Jupiter also would like to thank her staff for their patience, time and effort. Mrs. Barbara Cotter and Mrs. Judy Cook also deserve a special thank-you. Ms. Suzanne Clark, the staff greatly appreciates all you have done to make the yearbook the best it can be.
